An Italian Triumph.
As Hitler Sees Us.
Mr. Coolidge Doubts.
Mr. Gifford's Good News.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HONOR TO ITALY, and the energetic Mussolini, who never hesitates or pauses. Brazil reports the arrival of the first air squadron that ever crossed the Atlantic Ocean. It came from Italy, sent by Mussolini, commanded by Gen. Italo Balbo, a good name for an explorer.

Individuals have made the flight, but nobody before Mussolini ever attempted to send a squadron in regular formation over the Atlantic. That sets a new mark.

TOO SEE OURSELVES as others think they see us, reveals surprising details. The Jewish Telegraph Agency sends enlightening quotations from the Volkischer Beobachter, published in Munich, to support Mr. Hitler's imitation of Mussolini's Fascism. Under a heading, "The True Face of America," you learn that we build "mausoleums for cats of Carrara marble," and "church buildings of unheard of splendor." And we have "evangelists who flood the country, wallowing in disgraceful love adventures that are reported in the sensational press."

ALSO, YOU learn that "a mother of 11 children, crazed with hunger, shot seven of her babes, and tried to kill herself." The paper, not saying what was the matter with the other four, adds:

"This is America! Millions for cats, millions for hypocrisy, billions for personal luxury, but not a cent for a poor mother and her hungry children."

If all that is true, probably we deserve our "depression."

MR. COOLIDGE'S daily contribution to public thought expresses discouragement as regards public ownership of anything. He says in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph "the government has never shown much aptitude for real business." Not everybody will agree with that.

Our government showed considerable aptitude for business when it built the Panama Canal that private capital had been unable to build. It shows business ability in its management of the postoffice.

OTHER COUNTRIES show aptitude for business in the way of public ownership. For instance, a power company, owned by the Canadian government, charges its customers one-half the price charged by a private company operating in the United States, using electric power extracted from the same waterfall, Niagara.

Perhaps there is something to learn in Canada.

GOOD NEWS for those that hear with difficulty on the telephone. The company will supply an "amplifying device" making the incoming voice louder.

Mr. Walter S. Gifford, president of the big company, informs the writer that all the Bell companies will supply this apparatus for use at a nominal charge. A friend in Ohio to whom the writer suggested it, tried the device and writes:

"For the first time in years I have been able to hear my children talking to me from the Pacific coast."

If you are interested write to your telephone exchange.

GERMANY HAS a startling idea for fighting unemployment. Adam Dietrich, finance minister, suggests the use of government money to increase industrial payrolls, by subsidy, replacing unemployment doles with actual, productive wages.

Germany's government, now paying at the rate of $750,000,000 a year to 4,000,000 men out of work, gets nothing in return.

If Germany should subsidize industry, and dump the products on other nations, including this, we should have something more urgent than Russian dumping to deal with.

A BILL introduced in Congress would direct Secretary Mellon to establish an embargo against Russian manganese, grain, meat, eggs and sugar. Congressman Williamson, of South Dakota, introducing the bill, says:

This seems to be a confession that the Russians are not as incompetent as some thought, and hoped.

We flood foreign countries with automobiles and agricultural machinery, at prices they can't equal, because we know how.

Russia, apparently, knows how to do some things, too. Incidentally, she uses for wheat harvesting "combines" that cut, bind, sack and weigh the wheat, all in one operation.

The remarkable thing is that Russia, in spite of labor-saving machinery, is short 2,000,000 men for her work.

SENATOR NYE, very earnest, wants more strict campaign fund laws. He doesn't want rich men that want to be in the Senate to spend so much money. It is a pious thought, but is a rich man spending his money openly with public knowledge, worse than rich corporations in the old manner spending their money to put their puppets in the Senate, doing the job through political bosses in the old days before the primaries?

BANK BANDITS GET 30-60 YEARS

TWO KILLED ON BRIDAL TOUR

Bride, Mate, Speeding to Pittsburgh Home, Crash Trucks Near Canonsburg

CANONSBURG, Jan. 7.—A honeymoon ended in tragedy today when the bride and bridegroom were killed in an auto accident.

Edward E. Taylor, 35, Pittsburgh district manager for the Charles A. Schieren Company, and his wife, Jessie Anne Poore Taylor, 24, who were married in Wellsburg, W. Va., last Saturday, were driving to Pittsburgh. One mile east of Canonsburg, on the Washington-Pittsburgh road, their auto sidewiped one big van of the Red Star Transit Company and crashed into another, which was following.

Mrs. Taylor died an hour later in Canonsburg Hospital. Her husband died shortly before noon.

Tony Thomas, driver of the van, told Deputy Coroner James Jones that he could not explain the crash. Jones believed that Taylor possibly had fallen asleep at the wheel. Thomas was not held.

Mrs. Taylor, whose home was in Huntington, W. Va., was a nurse. Taylor had been Pittsburgh manager for the Schieren Company, which is in the leather-belting business, for eight years. His offices were in the Maloney Building, Second avenue.

CONFESS THEFT AT BAKERSTOWN

FRANKLIN, Jan. 7. — Two youths captured today in the holdup of a gasoline service station at Elmo, near here, admitted to state highway patrolmen the attempted robbery of the Bakerstown postoffice early yesterday, the police asserted. The youths, one wounded in Bakerstown, gave their names as Ronald Fleming and Merle Peare, both of Grove City. Both are 18.

According to Sergt. F. L. Garnow, they told of fleeing from Bakerstown to Pittsburgh, where they spent last night, sleeping in the stolen automobile used in the Bakerstown robbery. Peare, police said, was suffering from a bullet wound in the leg and buckshot wounds in his back and side.

Sergt. Garnow received a call from F. H. Kale at Elmo early today that two youths were breaking into his service station along the Reimersburg road. Patrolmen E. B. Snyder and C. E. Lundgreen were sent to the scene. Kale had captured Fleming. The officers found Peare and the car a short distance away.

The youths said they started out from Grove City, stealing a bicycle they rode to Slippery Rock. There they stole the automobile and strapped the bicycle on the back. Postmaster Carl Heckert, who drove the youths off with gunfire when they broke into his store at Bakerstown, told police about the bicycle.

WOUNDS WIFE, SELF AT COURT

BEAVER, Pa., Jan. 7.—Enraged at failure of an attempted reconciliation, Claude Williams, 38, police say, shot and seriously wounded his estranged wife, Hazel, in the Beaver County Courthouse here today, then shot himself in the ear as he stood on the courthouse steps.

Both were taken to the Rochester General Hospital. The husband probably will die. The wife's condition was less serious, attendants said.

Williams, a Pennsylvania Railroad fireman, had been haled into Domestic Relations Court today by his wife, from whom he had been separated for three months. His wife, who has been living with her parents in Crowe's Run, near Freedom, since her separation, appeared against him.

ONE SUBWAY INSTEAD OF TWO URGED

Transit Body Considers New Project Recommended By Street Car Company

One subway loop instead of two for the downtown triangle is proposed in a new plan under consideration by the Pittsburgh Transit Commission and the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The new tentative plan calls for a single track tube beneath Smithfield street from the Baltimore and Ohio station to Liberty avenue and thence down Liberty to Ferry or to an alley in the rear of Diamond street, back to Third avenue and up Third to Smithfield street.

OLD PLAN SIDETRACKED

The old plan called for two double-track tubes, one extending along Smithfield street from the Baltimore and Ohio station to Liberty avenue, and the other down Liberty avenue. The cost was estimated at $6,000,000.

The Pittsburgh Railways, which must agree to pay to the city a yearly sum equivalent to its saving in the operation of surface cars over the same area, is understood to have urged that only one tube be built at this time. It is

BIG RAIL ORDER PLACED HERE

The steel business in the Pittsburgh district and Western Pennsylvania received an impetus today with the announcement that the Pennsylvania Railroad had placed orders in the Pittsburgh district for a large percentage of the 200,000 tons of steel rails it will use this year.

The Carnegie Steel Company will produce 60,000 tons, and the Bethlehem Steel Company, which has big plants in Johnstown, Pa., received an order for 88,000 tons. The order was split among four manufacturers.

The order for rails alone amounts to $8,500,000, without additional expenditures for attachments, which will swell the total to $15,000,000.

Carnegie Steel's share will probably be more than $3,000,000. The rails will be rolled in the Edgar Thomson plant in Braddock.

'Relief' Football In Senate; Goal Posts Needed

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

He who gives quickly gives twice. But he who takes twice gets more.

Allowing for evaporation in transit, shrinking in distribution and loss through efficiency, we calculate that all the farmers will have new sun bonnets for the next rainy season.

They kick relief around so much in the Senate that they should have goal posts on each end of the building.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast. But, once in a while, those springs must be oiled.

Congress has appropriated money to feed live stock and

By DR. JOHN W. OLIVER.

(Dr. Oliver, who served in the Artillery Service in the World War and later with the American War College, is professor of history and head of the history department of the University of Pittsburgh).

America has been eagerly waiting for Gen. Pershing to speak. The military history of the World War has had to wait until his memoirs were published. Any atttempt to chronicle the part played by the United States in that great struggle would be futile until the historian has had access to the Pershing memoirs.

Now that they are to be published, the military historians can proceed with their task. (Editor's note—The Pershing Memoirs begin in the Sun-Telegraph January 12).

An advance reading of the first three installments of the Memoirs convinces me of their interest and indisputable worth.

Here we see Pershing the man, as well as Pershing the general. Here for the first time we appreciate the reason for his promotion over a host of superior officers. The many-sidedness of the man, linguistic, educational, and military, helps to clear up some of the doubts that we have had for years.

How fortunate the nation was to have such a man! Contrast the selection of President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker with the numerous selections that Lincoln had to make before finding Gen. Grant. Had President Wilson been forced to select and replace as many men as did Lincoln before finding a winner, it is doubtful whether the United States and the Allies would have ever won the war. The reasons for Pershing's success in leading 4,000,000 men who enlisted under his command will be revealed in the following instalments of these Memoirs.

(Foregoing is the first of a series of comments by leading educators and other authorities on the value and importance of Gen. Pershing's Memoirs, which the Sun-Telegraph will publish exclusively beginning January 12. Dr. Oliver was an A. E. F. artillery officer. He continued in government service in the American War College and is an authority on history.)

WIDOW'S PLANE IN BERMUDA

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 7 —(AP.)—The monoplane Trade Wind arrived here at 12:55 p. m. eastern standard time. The graceful white ship, carrying Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren, skimmed down to a pretty landing in Hamilton Harbor.

The flight from Hampton Roads, Va., had taken six hours and 55 minutes and completed the first leg of a projected flight to Paris by way of the Azores.

HAMPTON ROADS NAVAL STATION, Va., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The sleek white monoplane Tradewind, piloted by a youthful red-headed widow and the man who taught her to fly, streaked away in the darkness early today on a flight via Bermuda and the Azores to Paris, carrying a pay cargo.

Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren took to the air at 6 a. m. It was their second take-off on the flight and the fliers expressed belief that "Lady Luck," who deserted them on the attempt last Saturday, had smiled on the effort.

LIMIT GIVEN 2 FOR PERRY HOLDUP

Mother Pleads for Mercy; Youths Sent to Pen Less Than Month After Crime

Two of the six bandits who held up the Perry State Bank less than a month ago today were given maximum sentences by Judge George V. Moore in Criminal Court.

Harry Hoover, 19, and Edward Pishney, 19, were ordered to serve from 30 to 60 years in the Western Penitentiary.

Under the habitual criminal act they were sentenced from 20 to 40 years for robbing the Perrysville avenue bank of $5,000, and for taking the automobile of F. J. Chesterman, vice president of the Bell Telephone Company, which was used in the holdup, they were sentenced to 10 to 20 years.

INVESTIGATE THIRD

Sentence on the third bandit, who has confessed—Emile Grayshock, 21, was deferred when District Attorney Park asked for time in which to investigate Grayshock's record.

Grayshock's companion, Louis Francis, 18, who was arrested with him in Akron, O., was then arraigned. He pleaded guilty to accessory after the robbery, admitting that Grayshock had given him $100 of the loot and a gun. He will be sentenced later.

Hoover's mother, whose home is in Akron, O., pleaded for leniency. She said:

"Before my boy left home on the Monday before Thanksgiving he never did anything wrong. I have made great plans for him and he has always been a good boy."

ADMIT HOLDUPS

Pishney and Hoover, who did not have counsel, took the stand, following witnesses of the bank robbery, and also admitted having held up four places in Akron, O., and a hardware store in Paterson, N. J. They said they committed the robberies at the instigation of Benny Lipkovitz, reputed leader of their gang, who is recovering from a bullet wound

Officers Hunt Bergdoll In Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7. — (INS.)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia's millionaire draft dodger, was reported today to have returned from Germany during the night.

He arrived in New York yesterday aboard the S. S. Majestic and made his way here last evening, according to those who professed to have recognized him. However, the reports could not be verified.

America's most famous "slacker" left Weinsberg, Germany, where he has spent about nine years since the World War, after his family obtained permission for him to return to this country, it was said. Federal authorities here, however, declared they had no knowledge of any such arrangements. Both police and the Federal officials immediately started a checkup, but no results had been obtained.

Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, mother of the deserter, said she had no knowledge of the present whereabouts of her son except that she believes him still to be in Germany.

The wealthy 70-year-old mother said she wished the report were true that Grover had come home, and that she had begged and pleaded with him to give himself up many times.

Radio Fans Protest Curb On Priest's Jobless Talk

As zero hour approaches in radio's most discussed attempt at censorship—that of a sermon on "Prosperity" scheduled for the Columbia network Sunday at 7 p. m. from the Shrine of the Little Flower, Detroit—hundreds of letters poured into WJAS, local outlet, protesting the attempt to limit the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, rector, and urging him to carry on.

Last Sunday Father Coughlin criticized President Hoover in connection with the relief of unemployment. Columbia Broadcasting officials advised him to "tone down" his sermon this Sunday. The result has been that every station in the network has received letters protesting Columbia's attempt to censor his sermon.

In three days WJAS has received 1,138 such letters, 300 arriving this morning, it was said by H. J. Brennan, manager of WJAS.

From Detroit WJAS has received a wire:

"I won't tone my sermon down. It is going on the air Sunday, as is—and with additions. (Signed) Rev. Coughlin."

From Columbia's New York offices comes a telephone message:

"We have not attempted to censor Father Coughlin's remarks. We have only asked him to tone down his address this Sunday. We shall let it go on the air exactly as Father Coughlin wishes, but in the face of many protests we believe it wise for him to limit his criticism of the government."

In Detroit, Father Coughlin received 65,000 letters Tuesday. WCAU, the Philadelphia outlet for Columbia, has averaged 10,000 protests a day, it was reported.

PINCHOT TO HIT BACK AT FOES, CONFERS WITH MALONE

FORESTER BACK AT CAPITAL

By J. P. O'Brien
(Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 7.—Public utilities have won the first skirmish for control of the state, but at a cost which insures ultimate victory for the Pinchot program.

That is the opinion of Governor-elect Gifford Pinchot on the outcome of the election of Senator Augustus P. Daix, of Philadelphia, as president pro tem of the Senate and the defeat of Senator W. D. Mansfield, of McKeesport, the Pinchot candidate.

With characteristic zeal, the Governor-elect arrived here last night, unexpectedly, two days ahead of schedule, to take up the challenge hurled at him even before taking office.

GRUNDY VOTES FAIL

Despite the fact that in a formal statement he ascribed the Daix victory to public utilities pressure, political gossip still persisted to the effect that Pinchot privately laid his defeat to the failure of former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy to "swing" to the Mansfield column the two additional votes he had promised, and on which hinged victory or defeat.

Added emphasis was given the report that the new governor was to vent his wrath upon Grundy by rescinding his appointment of Samuel S. Lewis as state highway commissioner when James F. Malone, former president of Pittsburgh City Council, was called into conference with Pinchot. What materialized was not divulged. Malone and Lewis were the two leading candidates for the highway post Grundy, it being understood, winning the coveted honor for Lewis by his promise of the necessary votes for Mansfield, which failed to materialize.

Malone would make no comment other than to announce he would see Pinchot again today.

KLINE SEES PINCHOT

Mayor Charles H. Kline, of Pittsburgh, also was to see Pinchot today. They will probably talk about the remaining cabinet jobs, department of supplies, insurance commissioner, secretary of labor and industry and secretary of the commonwealth.

Charles F. Armstrong of Armstrong County, will be named either secretary of the commonwealth or department of supplies director, it appeared almost certain.

Pinchot also conferred yesterday with Grundy, State Senator James J. Coyne, of Pittsburgh, and Speaker C. Jay Goodnough.

UTILITIES BLAMED

His formal statement on the Daix fight follows:

"Nobody can deny that the public utilities have won the first skirmish.

"But 22 senators stood up in the caucus. The unprecedented pressure applied by the Pennsylvania Railroad and certain utility magnates and their financial and political supporters were unable to shake them. All the forces that were massed behind Brown in the primary and Hemphill in the general election where mobilized. Yet they were barely able to carry their point. Nothing like this ever happened in Pennsylvania before.

COULD AFFORD TO LOSE

"This was a fight we could afford to lose, but it was a fight these utilities could not afford to win. The people of Pennsylvania know at last beyond all question to what extent these utilities are prepared to go in order to control the state. And the resulting pressure from home is likely to drive our program through the Senate.

"The Pinchot administration and its friends will go straight ahead with a clear conscience and a clean record to use every honest method in their power to carry out the program the people have approved."

Machine Gun Victims Found

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—The bodies of two men identified as Leo Orlando and Isadore Katz, who police say were apparently the victims of a machine gun murder, were found on a lonely St. Louis county road today. The two bodies were discovered by a bakery wagon driver.

WOUNDS WIFE, SELF AT COURT

after hearing the evidence ordered Williams to pay $10 a week. He made no objection to this. Williams posted bond in the clerk of courts office and was leaving when he encountered his wife in the corridor.

The husband drew a revolver and fired two shots. The bullets took effect in the woman's arm and shoulder. She ran to the front door and staggered out onto the steps of the courthouse. As the wife fell face downward on the courthouse lawn, in view of several pedestrians, Williams placed the muzzle of the revolver to his head and pulled the trigger. Both were picked up unconscious and taken to the hospital.

The Williams children, Harold, 10, and Robert, 5, were not in court today.

Attorney Clyde Holt, representing Williams, informed the court at the hearing that Williams had made repeated efforts at reconciliation with his wife, but that she had refused. He had asked to see his children Christmas, but was refused, Holt asserted.

Before her marriage to Williams about 12 years ago, she was Hazel Hall, of the Freedom district. Williams has been living at 861 Canal street, Beaver.

NUTT CENSURES G.O.P. LEADER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican National Committee today in effect repudiated methods used by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the committee, in his fight against Senator George W. Norris, Republican-Insurgent, in Nebraska's election last November. Nutt said:

"I don't blame him for fighting Senator Norris—that may not be good politics—but I do not approve of his method. The note should never have been given. The letter should never have been written."

He referred to the $4,000 Lucas borrowed from a local bank as a "personal loan," using the special $50,000 committee account as security. Part of the proceeds of this loan went to pay for anti-Norris literature Lucas sent into Nebraska.

SINGLE SUBWAY PROPOSED

said to have requested the Transit Commission to build the Smithfield street tube.

The new plan of a single track loop subway is the Commission's answer. It is estimated that the single track loop will cost only $4,000,000.

Operation plans have not been discussed as yet, according to Railways company officials, but undoubtedly, it was said, there would be entrances at all three points of the loop for through operation of cars from the South Hills, West End and North Side and East End. Traffic could be routed through the tubes, passengers transferring to any point in the downtown triangle without leaving the subway.

DELAY HURTS PLAN

Because of delay in the proposed Pennsylvania Railroad terminal improvement program, it is declared that the subway plan as originally laid out in two tubes will suffer. The Penn-Liberty avenue tube is largely dependent upon ultimate developments in the rail terminal layout. Many persons are of the opinion that many years will elapse before the Pennsylvania Railroad goes ahead with its plans, what with bus and plane competition and merger plans occupying the immediate attention of rail executives.

The new plan can be carried out entirely independently of the railroad improvement program, it is said, and if the plan meets with all-around approval the work can be gotten under way by spring.

FITZGERALD SILENT

Thomas F. Fitzgerald, president of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, revealed that the plan had been submitted by the Transit Commission, but further than to agree to operation, refused to comment. He said:

"If the public wants this plan we will be willing to operate it and contribute whatever economies are derived from subway operations."

He went on to point out that the subway was not of the railways' designing and intimated the possibility of more efficient plans from the standpoint of efficiency in operation, but declined to go into detail.

suffered when he was shot by a New York detective. He will be brought here for trial when he recovers sufficiently.

The Perry State Bank, 3908 Perrysville avenue, was held up December 13, by half a dozen bandits who herded employes and customers, including women and children into the vault at the point of revolvers.

FLEE WITH CASH

Two of the robbers grabbed packages of bills and bags of coin. In fleeing they separated, two escaping in a taxicab.

In preparing for the holdup the bandits had kidnaped Harry Hull driving a car owned by F. J. Chesterman, vice president of the Bell Telephone company, bound and gagged him, left him lying in a field near Etna and stole the car. It was later recovered.

Two days after the bank holdup eight bags containing $1,560 in silver were found in the wardrobe of a Tripoli street rooming house. The bandits had rented the room two weeks before. They had returned for the remainder of their loot, but left after reading in the newspapers that the coin had been recovered.

Lipkovits, reputed leader of the gang, was captured in New York after being shot and seriously wounded by a New York detective. His two pals, Hoover and Pishney, were arrested the following day when they went to a bank to open a safe deposit box believed to contain part of the bank loot.

Still in Air, Girl Fliers To Hold Birthday Party

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Bobbie Trout, who with Edna May Cooper is out to break the masculine monopoly on endurance flight records, was celebrating her twenty-fifth birthday anniversary in the air today.

In honor of the event the girl flier will have a party at noon. Her only guest will be her co-pilot, but she will have a birthday cake, candles and all, to eat off the gasoline tank which serves the girls as a table in their plane, the Lady Rolph.

Yesterday the feminine endurance team broke the existing women's sustained flight record of 42 hours 16 minutes, and sailed on toward the 645-hour record of the men, held by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine. At 5:30 a. m. today they passed the 65-hour mark, flying serenely through a cloudless sky.

Mrs. Lola B. Trout, mother of Bobbie, busied herself in her kitchen last night, making the birthday cake. She said:

"It won't be much like a lot of her birthday parties, but Bobbie will enjoy it. I've made a cake for every one of her birthdays, and just because she is flying around is no reason why this one should be an exception."

HOOVER FACES REBUKE OVER POWER CHIEF

Senate Bloc Will Insist on President's Returning Nominatoin for Revocation

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—With a new constitutional question at issue, the administration faced another political rebuke in the Senate today as a Democratic-Insurgent coalition prepared to call on President Hoover to return the recently confirmed nomination of George Otis Smith as chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

The new issue was whether President Hoover need obey the request of the Senate, since Smith has been commissioned and has entered upon his duties as chairman. Administration leaders feel Mr. Hoover can ignore the Senate's request. If he does, a peculiar situation will follow, since the Senate could not act without the nomination before it. Later, it could easily rebuke the President and virtually nullify the commission by refusing to pass appropriations for it.

MIGHT REVERSE ACTION

It appeared certain the Senate would vote to reconsider Smith's confirmation and to request the President to return the nomination. Even administration leaders conceded this development. If the President should accede to the request, it was entirely probable the Senate would reverse itself and reject Smith's appointment.

OVERSHADOWS RELIEF

END DEADLOCK ON SHOALS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The long-standing deadlock between the House and Senate on Muscle Shoals legislation was broken today when the House conferees agreed to government building of power transmission lines.

This was the major point in controversy between the two houses.

Conferees said they believed it may open the way for final disposition at this session of the 10-year old problem of what to do with the government's $150,000,000 power nitrate plant on the Tennessee river at Muscle Shoals, Alabama.

Cuban Police Seize 51 in Revolt Plot

Won't Raise Postage Rate, Kelly Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Letter writers were told today that a two-cent stamp will continue to carry their mail.

Representative Kelly, ranking Republican on the Postoffice Committee, said in the House that the 2½-cent cost proposed by Postmaster General Brown would not be adopted.

SECRET DAVIS PROBE BARED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A new and secret development in the investigation of campaign expenditures in behalf of Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, today held up further hearings on the case before the Senate Campaign Funds Committee.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Committee, revealed agents of the committee are in Pennsylvania working on a heretofore untouched phase of the inquiry which has been under way for months.

Other than to say the agents were checking "various rumors" which have reached his ears concerning the nomination of Davis at the primary election last May, Nye refused to discuss the new angle of the inquiry. He likewise declined to give the whereabouts of the agents in the state.

Chairman Nye had planned to hold the final hearing in the case today with Samuel M. Vauclain, treasurer of the Davis-Brown campaign committee, and possibly Senator Davis himself, appearing as witnesses.

DROUGHT-AID BILL BALKED IN HOUSE

Farm Food Amendment Stirs Urban Group Resentment; La Guardia Stops Measure

By WILLIAM S. NEAL.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Action on the $45,000,000 drought-relief bill was blocked again in the House today as the fight of representatives of big city districts to prevent appropriations to buy food for farmers alone developed intensity.

Representative LaGuardia (Rep.), of New York, prevented the bill from going to conference for a settlement of differences between Senate and House over the Senate amendment adding $15,000,000 to provide food for farmers in hard-hit areas.

'WATCHFUL WAITING'

Republican chieftains of the house meanwhile assumed an attitude of "watchful waiting" toward the bill as the conflict between city and rural members of the House grew.

Republican leaders demanded that Southern Democrats backing the Caraway amendment abandon their fight for a vote in the House and permit the bill to go to conference.

At the same time some representatives from big urban centers declared they would fight for appropriations up to $50,000,000 to feed unemployed in cities if the bill carries money to buy food for farmers.

FIGHT FOR CITIES

Representatives LaGuardia and Sabath (Dem.), of Illinois, were fighting the food proposal—unless it were made to apply to cities as well. Sabath said:

"My objection to the bill is that it is high time that some consideration be given to city people in need of aid as well as farmers.

"I have voted for farm relief and am willing to continue to do so, but, I'm going to demand that if we provide food for them we also provide food for the needy in cities."

He said he would favor $30,000,000 to buy food, to be apportioned between city and rural areas.

Representative Patterson (Dem.), of Alabama, who also objected to the drought relief bill going to conference without instructions, said he favors $50,000,000 to buy food for needy.

Republican leaders were determined to kill the Caraway amendment, and prevent the addition of any others to buy food. The Caraway amendment was voted by the Senate after a food riot by farmers was reported from Arkansas.

BLAME SOUTHERNERS

Representative Wood rejected suggestions that the $45,000,000 bill be attached to the deficiency bill now under consideration. Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader, declared that Southern Democrats must take the blame if the seed loan bill is long delayed. He said:

"We have passed the $45,000,000 bill once and are ready to get it to the President as quickly as possible. If Southern members, who say the money is needed quickly, continue to block passage, they must accept the responsibility."

Southern Democrats, declared "gag rule" was proposed by the Republican leaders. The demand of those objecting to a conference was solely on the ground there should be instructions from the House, Patterson declared.

Big Chicago Subway Fund Given Approval

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—An appropriation bill carrying $14,242,000 from the city's traction fund for construction of the State street subway was approved last night by the finance committee of the city council. The measure now goes to the council.

5 MILLION IDLE, WOODS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Chairman Woods, of the Hoover committee on employment, estimated today before the Senate Appropriations Committee that there are between four and five million unemployed.

Unemployment has been increasing, he testified, saying he did not believe the situation would improve until spring. The important thing, he said, is not relief, but provide jobs, adding:

"There is altogether too much unemployment and the way in which this comes about does not speak well for industry. There has been a general feeling in this country that periods of depression are inevitable. They are not and should not be regarded as inevitable."

The chairman said he believed the lowest period concerning employment was likely to be felt this month and next. He said the special census to be made the middle of the month should show things at their worst.

Requested by Senators to state what could be done, Col. Woods said his emergency committee aimed to assist the different localities and set in motion machinery to aid employment.

Coolidge Favors Sending Back Undesirable Aliens

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 7.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A few years ago we were discussing Americanization of our residents of foreign birth. Not being an appropriate word, it aroused considerable antagonism among those we desired to help, which we can comprehend by thinking of our own reaction if, on entering a foreign country, volunteer associations or governmental agencies tried to transform us into natives.

Calvin Coolidge

What we really intended was a course of helpful education to instruct new arrivals to the United States in the meaning of our laws and customs so that they might better avoid the perils and secure the advantages of being here. But with the natural aptitude which people have and with the restriction of immigration little outside help has been necessary.

The great proportion of immigrants duly become desirable citizens. But those who fail to respond to the privileges of our country, who fall into evil ways and violate our laws should be punished for their crimes and then deported. We have all we can do to take care of deserving people without being burdened with those who demonstrate their unfitness to enjoy our liberties.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID JOFFRE BY FRANCE

Marshal's War Deeds Lauded At Funeral; Body Placed Temporarily by Napoleon's

PARIS, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The body of Marshal Joffre, hero of the Marne, rested today in Les Invalides, hall of French immortals, whose massive dome shelters the bodies of Napoleon and Foch.

Two million Parisians braved freezing weather to stand outside Notre Dame and along the route to Les Invalides for hours while the funeral cortege, in somber ceremony, proceeded from the cathedral to the temporary resting place of the man who saved France from the invader in 1914.

JOFFRE'S WORK EXTOLLED

In front of the Invalides, war veterans who had suffered wounds while serving under "Papa" Joffre were given seats of honor, while Senator Louis Barthou, minister of war and personal friend of the Marshal, extolled his services to his country.

M. Barthou traced the Marshal's military career and explained his strategy at the Marne, which was that the retreat before the battle was his preparation for the conflict.

He compared the marshal with Washington and Franklin, and in his perporation commented that although misjudged he had felt no bitterness, and had said nothing which would risk harming the fair name of France.

CITES VISIT TO AMERICA

He lauded the move which sent Joffre to America in 1917, and extolled the marshal's conduct there as one who possessing glory did not lack modesty.

Barthou said:

"Joffre has made no mistake. The brotherly accolade of the two peoples came as a realization of all his hopes.

"No one has better recognized than Joffre the great achievements of these millions of men who willingly dropping their peaceful occupations, crossed seas which were alive with death, and thousands of miles from their fatherland gave their lives for a grand and noble idea."

After the funeral oration the marshal's body was borne into the tomb of Napoleon, where it will remain temporarily until a mausoleum to be constructed at his home at Louveciennes is completed.

21-GUN SALUTE

The evenly spaced boom of 21 cannon shots signalled the start of the funeral march from Notre Dame, where high mass was read while hundreds of thousands patiently awaited the cortege.

Following the body and a few steps behind the Joffre family, marched in solid phalanx President Doumergue and his cabinet, including the presidents of the Chamber and Senate, as well as members of the French government and the diplomatic corps.

Ambassador Walter E. Edge represented the United States at Notre Dame and in the cortege, with 34 active and reserve American Army officers headed by a color guard composed jointly of members of the American Legion and members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars officially representing the United States military services.

1 SHIP BURNS; FIND BODY OF PILOT

Censorship Delays News of Collision; 10 Other Craft To Resume Trip in Brazil

BEUNOS AIRES, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A dispatch to La Nacion from Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, today said two of the planes of the Italian transoceanic expedition collided off Praiabranca yesterday shortly after the planes took off for Natal, Brazil.

One of the planes fell in flames, the other returned to Bolama, damaged.

The body of the pilot of one of the planes was said by the dispatch to have been recovered yesterday.

CENSORSHIP LIFTED

Government censorship of the news was lifted today, but details were withheld largely to avoid alarming families of the fliers.

FLEET TO FLY ON SOON

NATAL, Brazil, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Elated at the success in leading 10 of his squadron of 12 seaplanes to a safe landing here after a formation flight from Italy and across 1,860 miles of ocean, Gen. Italo Balbo today ordered immediate overhauling of all machines for an early resumption of the flight to its final destination, Rio de Janeiro.

BALBO LANDS FIRST

The 10 seaplanes negotiated the long hop from Portuguese East Africa in 18 hours and 46 minutes. They left Orbetello, Italy, on December 17, but were held up on the African coast by adverse weather.

First to land in the harbor here was the huge black machine piloted by Gen. Balbo, Italian air minister and leader of the group. His squadron swooped down in two groups.

ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME

Gen. Balbo and his 39 companion fliers, welcomed enthusiastically by a large crowd and feted until late into the night, said the long ocean grind was marked by sudden rain squalls and thick banks of low-hanging clouds. Poor visibility finally forced him to signal the various units to spread out as much as possible. He said:

"Near the Brazilian coast high winds rocked our ships severely. The planes, with the exception of the ones forced down, behaved splendidly all the way."

CRANK'S THREAT SENT NOTABLES

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Almost a dozen men of prominence have received notes from a disgruntled inventor whose threats against Owen D. Young, head of the General Electric Company, caused a guard to be given to him recently.

Fifty detectives, including the police bomb squad, have been seeking the man, who, they say, is a former radio dealer and who has charged in his letters that a device he invented is in use by radio manufacturers without his consent or compensation.

Officials of the Radio Corporation of America, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., A. Atwater Kent, Powell Crosley, Jr., Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Churches of Christ in America; and the Revs. Daniel Poling and Harry Emerson Fosdick were named today among those to whom the letter-writer had sent missives in the last 17 months. Other letters, not threats, were received by congressmen and state officials, including Gov. Roosevelt.

CHEAT POWER DECISION READY

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Judge Arthur P. Hudson, of Kanawha County Circuit Court, today notified attorneys in the Cheat River hydro-electric power case that he would hand down his decision in the case Saturday morning.

Judge Hudson has had the case under advisement since November 21 when it was placed before him on an appeal from the decision of the Public Service Commission which granted authority to the West Virginia Power and Transmission Company to develop water power on the Cheat and Blackwater rivers.

In appealing the case, the protestants attacked the constitutionality of the 1929 water power act and the decision of the commission in granting the license. The protestants also contended that economic loss would result to the state under the terms of the act.

Russians Abandon Christmas Holiday

MOSCOW, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Today is the Russian Orthodox Christmas, but it was not celebrated with the enthusiasm of former years because the Soviet campaign aimed against all religious festivals is keeping the people out of the churches.

Many churches held services this morning, but their congregations were slim. Millions of workers who used to observe this holiday at least as a day of rest voted this year to stay on the job and censured all those who took a day off.

Seven persons were routed from their homes this morning when fire swept two Glenwood stores and the living apartments above them. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

Bela Deutsch discovered fire in his Glenwood Variety Store, 5436 Second avenue, shortly after 9 o'clock. The flames quickly spread to his apartment above the store. He assisted his wife, Pearl, out of the building, after arousing his son, Alfred, who was asleep. Two other children were at school.

The flames spread to the confectionery store of Martin Manning, 5434 Second avenue, driving Timothy Kelleher, his wife and infant daughter, living on the second floor, and Manning from the building. Other properties nearby were threatened. The fire is believed to have been caused by an overheated furnace.

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 7. — (AP.)—C. L. Jones, grocer, is curious concerning the loss of his cork leg, $90 in gold and a woman customer. He became ill in his store, he told police, and the woman offered to care for him. He accepted. At his home she made him hot lemonade. He soon fell asleep. When he awoke, he related, the nurse was gone and so was his artificial leg, in which the gold was hidden.

QUITS BASEBALL FOR HOME

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The call of the home has lured away Mrs. Florence Killilea Boley, until today the only woman president of a baseball team, from handling the Milwaukee American Association Club for another year.

Not, she says, that baseball isn't the place for a woman—she expects to be in the stands this summer yelling for the Brewers—but its merely that home comes first, now that she's married. And her physician-husband, she says, ought to have something more than a baseball fan for a wife.

President of the Brewers for two years, and half owner since the death of her father, Henry J. Killilea, Mrs. Boley resigned her position yesterday. Her official reason for becoming a director was that she "thought the road trips required of the president were a little too strenuous for a woman."

RAID ON EARL'S TOMB MYSTERY

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The romance, intrigue and tragedy which tangled the life of Mary, Queen of Scots, was recalled today as Danish police sought to unravel the mystery surrounding the rifling of the sarcophagus of the Earl of Bothwell, Mary's third husband.

Whether a desire for jewels once belonging to Mary and said to have been buried with Bothwell or a feeling of revenge maintained through four centuries by descendants of those he wronged motivated the violation police would not say, pending investigation.

Police yesterday found the sarcophagus, containing the remains of the earl, who was the fourth of his line and who died insane in a castle in Zealand on April 14, 1578, broken open and its contents disarranged.

'Worthless' Armour Stock Brings Widow Millions

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A romance of big business in which one of the fondest dreams of the late J. Ogden Armour came true, was revealed today with the announcement that the controlling interest of the Universal Oil Products Company had been sold for $25,000,000, of which $8,216,058 went to Ogden's widow, Mrs. Lolita Sheldon Armour.

The Shell Union Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of California were the purchasers. The deal involved 1,000 shares of the Universal Company, which sponsored the Dubbs oil cracking process, in which Mr. Armour invested $3,000,000 to $4,000,000. He always had faith that it would yield a profit, but he died in London without the dream being realized. Today his widow knew his faith had not been in vain.

Mrs. Armour received her share of the purchase price for 400 shares of stock in the Universal Company, which was a part of her husband's estate and which his creditors at one time had refused to accept as a valuable asset.

A year ago the Armour estate was closed in Probate Court, showing an insolvency of $1,805,000, which was a sad contrast to the $150,000,000 Armour was reputed to have been worth in moneyed war times. But last night the woman who had been stripped of much of her wealth was very happy. She said:

"I guess this shows that Mr. Armour was justified in backing that inventor's process. And those bankers who called my stock a liability, well, I can laugh now at them the same as they laughed at the stock."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.

The automobile industry shows every sign of returning prosperity, President Hoover told manufacturers in an address delivered from his study here over the long distance phone last night to the annual banquet at the automobile show in New York. The President said:

"The despondency of some people over the future is not borne out by the statistical evidence of prospects in respect to the automobile industry.

"I am informed that if I were speaking to every person whose livelihood is directly or indirectly dependent upon the industry I should be speaking to one person in every 10 of the people of our country. Therefore, the prosperity of the industry is in the anxious thoughts of the nation.

CITES BIG OUTPUT

"I am informed by the Department of Commerce that despite the depression you have manufactured and sold during this year 1930 over 3,500,000 automobiles. You have also disposed of the large inventories of a year ago. Hundreds of miles of new roads are being constructed every day in the world and these increasing miles must be equipped with more automobiles.

"I am informed also that the consumption of gasoline during the last year shows an increase of 5 per cent over even the highly optimistic year of 1929. This certainly means that we have been cheerful in the use of our automobiles; I do not assume they are being used for transportation to the poorhouse.

OUTLOOK NOT DEPRESSING

"While I am aware that many people are using the old automobile a little longer, it is obvious that they are still using it and that it is being worn out. Altogether the future for the industry does not warrant any despondency.

"I wish you success in your meeting and in the organization plans which you put forward for the new year. Every automobile and truck which you make and sell adds to employment in a hundred different trades. Yours is indeed a great and vital industry."

FUMES VICTIM RECOVERING

Suffering from exposure and carbon monoxide gas poisoning, E. S. Norton, 312 Western avenue, Aspinwall, was recovering in his home today. He was overcome while repairing an automobile in his garage yesterday.

Norton was discovered unconscious on the running board of the machine by his son, Robert, when the boy came home from school yesterday afternoon. Inhalators were rushed by Aspinwall police and the victim was revived.

Uniontown Radio Plea Resubmitted

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—J. Milton Guyton, Uniontown, Pa., resubmitted an application for a broadcasting station requesting 250 watts in power both day and night with a frequency of 320 kilocycles. The station would be operated three nights a week as well as daily during daylight hours.

Prospectors Find 'Klondike' in Panama

COLON, Panama, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Visions of another Klondike," this one in the Isthmus of Panama, were raised here when four New England Yankees returned to Colon bringing with them the richest samples of gold ore ever seen in the Isthmus.

The prospectors, who had been absent from this city for some time, said they had made their "strike" somewhere "in the mountains in the interior" of the Isthmus. They declined to reveal even the approximate location. One prospector said:

"We found a half an acre of this rich gold-bearing ore in there. There is enough gold in there to assure huge fortunes to all of us."

LINGLE KILLING SUSPECT SLAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—For one of a dozen possible reasons gang vengeance has caught up with Patsy Tardi, and today the body of the youthful hoodlum who boasted of his toughness lies on a slab in the county morgue, two bullet holes through his skull.

Tardi, a suspect in the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, was confronted by two assassins, who blazed away at him with automatic pistols last night. Tardi's companion, Ralph Costanzo, 20, was probably fatally wounded.

The killers fled on foot when alarmed citizens living near Miller and Polk streets turned in an alarm. An inquest was to be held today.

TRY TO FLOAT STRANDED SHIP

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Efforts to float the freighter William N. Page, stranded between two sand bars off the Long Island coast, will be made at high tide today. The vessel, with 58 officers and crew on board, lay broadside to the coast, a mile west of the Potunk Coast Guard station.

Small boats could not reach the freighter, and darkness last night ended attempts by an airplane to stretch a line to shore to remove the crew.

Pilot George Herzog made several futile efforts to drop a line to the ship from his plane, and high winds almost tossed his craft into the sea.

Coast Guard vessels stood by during the night and the ship's officers wirelessed they were in no immediate danger.

TOWNSHIP CODE CHANGE ASKED

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Proposed legislation designed to prevent annexation of portions of townships by adjoining cities or boroughs without majority vote of the township residents and revision of the new township code was the principal theme of the convention of township commissioners of Pennsylvania here, as the convention drew to a close and delegates prepared to return home today.

The commissioners also indicated they would favor legislation making illegal incorporation into a borough of any part of a township without consent of all voters in the township.

A resolution asking approval of these proposals was presented to the convention by W. E. Armstrong, Allegheny County, but delegates approved only the portion concerning annexation.

Bishop Cannon Takes Rest Cure in Texas

MARLIN, Tex., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was in a sanatorium at this Texas Spa today, avoiding all interviews while he sought relief for a rheumatic ailment. His physician reported last night he had shown some improvement since his arrival here January 2.

Rolph Orders Halt For All Hangings

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Gov. James Rolph, Jr., California's new chief executive and former 20-year mayor of San Francisco, announced today he intended to stop all pending hangings until he had an opportunity to investigate the cases of the men sentenced to die. He said:

"Any man sentenced to be hanged should have opportunity to have his case presented the governor."

DRY LAW BOARD SILENT ON FINDINGS

Wickersham Commission in Brief Meeting, Recesses Without Announcement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission recessed unexpectedly today until January 14.

Secrecy was maintained as to whether this meant the long-awaited report on prohibition, now virtually complete, was ready for submission to President Hoover, or whether it would be further deliberated upon next Wednesday before being taken to the White House.

MEETING BRIEF

There was no indication at commission headquarters that the report already had left the hands of the members.

The commission met for less than two hours today. No reason was given for the recess. Only eight of the 11 members were present.

Meanwhile, a dingy room in East Twenty-second street, Indianapolis, escaped the attention of Congress as Representative Linthicum of Maryland charged the place was a government-owned speakeasy used to trap policemen.

ACCUSATION ON FLOOR

The leader of the House anti-dry bloc made his accusation on the floor during debate on a deficiency bill which carries more than half a million for increasing the prohibition bureau's staff. He read a letter from Director Woodcock stating the government paid rent for the place, but that no liquor was dispensed. It was opened, said the letter, following many complaints of collusion between policemen and speakeasy operators.

The Linthicum attack was the opening effort of an anti-dry move to defeat the prohibition bureau deficiency appropriation. It was sufficient to cause House leaders to change their plans for immediate passage of the bill.

DRYS IN MEETING

Federal prohibition chiefs joined with nationally known dry leaders in outlining before an Anti-Saloon League meeting last night ways and means for increased enforcement of the prohibition laws.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition and now counsel for a grape concentrate concern, told the dry group prohibition was "one of the world's great movements" and that there would "never be a weakening in its enforcement."

Other speakers included Prohibition Director Woodcock, Commissioner Doran of Industrial alcohol, Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, and F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

Woodcock said he felt "much more optimistic" than when he took office six months ago.

TALKING ABOUT PERSHING'S STORY

PERSHING'S WAR STORY PRAISED TO LEGION

County Adjutant Comments On Memoirs at Meeting; Urges Vets to Seek Prizes

Favorable comment on Gen. John J. Pershing's story of the World War, which begins Monday in the Sun-Telegraph exclusively, was made by County Adjutant Robert K. Cochrane, Jr., at the monthly meeting of the Allegheny County committee of the American Legion in Fort Pitt Hotel last night.

Five hundred dollars of the $3,000 in cash prizes to be awarded for the best sets of answers submitted to 10 questions to be spread throughout the publication of the story, has been alloted to the American Legion, Cochrane said he was informed by those in charge of the contest.

URGES COMPETITION

He urged representatives of the 42 Allegheny County posts to get their members to try for the prizes in the special class. Relatives and friends of the Legionnaires may enter the contest in the other classes.

After reading the letter telling of the story and contest Cochrane said:

"I'm sure every ex-service man will be interested in Pershing's story and will try for the prizes."

MONEY TO AID NEEDY

Most of the time at last night's meeting was devoted to discussion of the 1931 budget, amounting to $8,650. The major portion of this sum, it was explained, is for service work, an aid for destitute members and their families.

National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil, of Topeka, Kan., will be honored by the Allegheny County Committee at its tenth annual banquet the evening of February 3 in the ballroom of Hotel William Penn. The committee in charge of the affair includes Charles M. Smith, chairman; Walter P. Grimm, Charles G. Lane, Jr., and Dr. Carl E. McKee.

For the first time in the hotel's history, it was said, a boxing ring will be erected on the ballroom floor. Several bouts will provide entertainment.

Martin was taken to city hall from his room in the Olney section of the city to await arrival of Washington authorities. Police said he was not under arrest.

He told them, detectives said, that he was acquainted with Miss Limerick and had seen her in Washington last August, but denied any knowledge of the slaying. Martin is 19 years old.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Written into the recommendations of his annual message Gov. Roosevelt today left on the doorstep of a new Republican-controlled legislature the exclusive responsibility of deciding upon a New York city investigation.

The Governor selected the message to answer demands for a general investigation of the governmental and judicial affairs of the metropolis. He described to the Legislature limitations placed by statute upon his investigating power and told the law-makers that they alone possessed the power to conduct a general investigation into all phases of the government judiciary of the city.

The nation-wide problem of utility regulation, the Governor said, was the result of a "long course of judicial decisions and of newly-invented methods of financing" which meant that householders and business men of the nation, in a number of instances "must now pay exorbitant rates measured not in terms of reasonableness for legitimate investors but rather in terms of speculative profit."

PRESBYTERIANS FOR DRY LAW

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The administration committee of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education it was announced today, has reaffirmed the stand of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. in favor of prohibition and has declared that not only must the saloon not come back, but the government must not go into the liquor business."

The official message of "the Presbyterian Church and Prohibition" which contains a renewed dedication of the entire membership to a program of education which will make America the most temperate and the most law-observing nation in the world," was written by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr of Pittsburgh, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

The message states among other things, that the prohibition law still has the support of the majority of the voters of the United States, that there are no youth anti-prohibition movements that prohibition has not been the chief cause of lawlessness, and that the church cannot see at present any substitute for prohibition which will make for a better solution of the liquor traffic.

OHIO BILLS URGE DRY REPEAL

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Repeal of the Ohio prohibition enforcement laws had become a question of first magnitude before the Ohio General Assembly today, with resolutions introduced in the Senate and House providing for a vote of the people on the proposal to repeal the laws.

State Senator Joseph N. Ackerman, of Cleveland, introduced the Senate measure. That in the House was presented by Representative Louis Nippert, of Hamilton County. Both are Republicans.

The House resolution received much applause from the floor.

The resolutions provide that by a three-fifth vote of the General Assembly the matter of repeal shall be submitted to the electors for a vote next November.

No immediate action was taken on the resolutions which under the rules will go before the temperance committees of the respective branches for consideration and recommendations.

GOV. CROSS OUT FOR REPEAL

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Ultimate repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was termed the only "way out of the morass in which we are floundering" by the new Governor of Connecticut, Wilbur L. Cross, dean emeritus of the Yale University Graduate School, in his inaugural address today.

Gov. Cross declared for the return of the control of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors to the states.

The governor is a Democrat, told the General Assembly, which is Republican:

"If you agree with me, I trust that you will express your disapproval of national prohibition in ways you deem most appropriate.

"It would be perfectly proper for you to memorialize Congress on the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment. Under favorable circumstances we might request the legislatures of other states to join with us in an application to Congress for a constitutional convention for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Wood Stages 'Comeback,' Heads New Mexico Guard

SANTA FE, N. M., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—From the gay life of Paris and Monte Carlo where he lost fortune and health, through a brilliant comeback by the coal miner route in New Mexico, has come Osborne C. Wood to attain the title of colonel and adjutant general of New Mexico.

Such is the signal honor conferred upon the son of the late Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood as the first official act of Gov. Arthur Seligman after taking the oath of office.

Wood's past escapades while a lieutenant in the United States Army and his service in the Philippines constitute his forgotten past to him, although they spell a life of adventure. Out in the mountains, desert land and wilderness of the Southwest he has carved for himself a new niche among friends who never question whether he ever had a fortune or how he lost it.

Four years ago he came to New Mexico. No one knew he was here. In the depths of the Hagen coal mine he worked with pick and shovel at miners wages for nearly two years. He rebuilt lost health and accumulated muscle. He interested himself in the New Mexico national guard starting in the ranks and attaining a captaincy.

He was accorded the honor of leading the New Mexico 111th Cavalry in review at Fort Bliss. Newspapers heralded the comeback of Wood and once more his past was blazoned in headlines.

On New Year's day Gov. Seligman made Wood adjutant general under the new state administration.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM IN REVIEW; NOTES ABOUT LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Joel McCrea Finally Wins Recognition and Part With Miss Bennett

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 7.

The word is going around Hollywood that tall, young Joel McCrea is destined to flutter the heart of many a feminine fan.

After dubbing around at R-K-O, which had the original vision to sign him, but not the confidence to follow it up, McCrea is just commencing to gain recognition.

Awakened at last, Radio Pictures is lending him to Paths which owns, to play opposite Constance Bennett in "Lost Love," story of Miss Bennett's growing popularity that has itself a feather in the actor's cap.

Joel McCrea

Fox recently borrowed McCrea, and was quick to recognize the possibilities. They gave him the juvenile lead in "Lightnin'," followed with a lead opposite Dorothy Mackaill.

McCrea is a tall, thick-haired leading man, and is of the athletic type. A number of feminine stars of Hollywood recognized his attributes before Radio Pictures got wise.

CUMMINGS QUITS FOX

When a story comes out that a director and a comedian have broken a contract by mutual consent, it is natural to suspect that all is not being told. The exception seems to be the case of Irving Cummings, who is quitting Fox because of illness and because of inability to find a story that suits him. Upon Cummings' return, the contract was torn up, but the first suitable story that turns up will lead to his recall.

LATEST GOSSIP

Will Rogers has a new way of announcing quittin' time on the set. Until recently, when 5 o'clock came, he used to ask: "What time tomorrow?" Now, he announces: "I hear the call of the canyon." And, anyway, he says, all operations have to stop right there. . . . Rex Lease, whose genius at getting into scrapes has cost him several film jobs, is the author of several lyrics used in "The Eleven-Fifteen Revue." . . . Lee Mildmer, well-known portrait painter, is in Hollywood visiting his son, Kenneth McKenna. . . . Sydney Blackmer has returned from New York to start work at First National. . . . During a recent Hollywood party, a pretty young thing asked her escort to introduce her to one of the authors of "Queer People." A little tipsily, he took her over to the proper table, but neither of the authors were there. Suddenly, his brow cleared, for he had sighted Maj. Rupert Hughes. Dragging his girl over he said:

"This guy didn't write 'Queer People,' but he is the author of 'Ladies' Man.' Will he do?"

CAST IN 'SEED'

Universal has decided to give her the lead opposite John Boles in the talkie version of Charles G. Norris's "Seed."

Genevieve Tobin and her sister Vivian, were given their first screen test when they were children by Charlie Chaplin. He offered them parts in a picture, but they refused.

Poem

I do not care for blossoms
That bloom upon the trees,
They don't appeal to me at all,
They're always full of bees.

I do not care for flowers
That peep up from the green,
The only thing I like them for
Is to obstruct the scene.

And some grow in the water,
I mean the water lily,
It holds no sentiment for me,
I think it looks real silly.

Nor do I care for flowers
Midst crevices and rocks,
But, ah! for just one orchid
In a little paper box.

—Terpsichorine.

How!

Benny Holzman's contrib for today deals with the Irishman and the dialectician who were co-workers in a Canadian lumber camp. They slept on adjoining cots.

One cold night the heeb awoke, complaining of the chilled blasts.

"Why don't you take my blanket?" said his Irish pal.

Oop!

One of those fading ingenues encountered S. Jay Kaufman on the highway the other day and began showing off again.

"I am writing my biography," she horsefeathered, "for the Saturday Evening Post—"

Imagine

From Beau Broadway comes this unbelievable scene, said to have happened in the Chelsea Bank on the day of the run. A well-known sister act were last in the line (before the teller's window was closed) and they got out their life-savings—$800.

As they ankled away from the window counting the coin, the man who was next in line and not so fortunate as the sisters, said:

Wiseys

By W. G. Haisley: Only the brave desert the fair . . . Wives of great men all remind us of it . . . 'Tis love that makes the world go 'round with that pained expression.

Scene

Among other "so-what-of-it?" retorts reported by our spy, detailed back-stage at Mr. Ziegfeld's "Smiles" show, is the following eavesdropped chatter. Two of the merry maidens were gossiping.

"Between you and I," said one, "I think Mildred is giving him money."

"You shouldn't say 'between you and I,'" counseled the other.

"Pardon my damp hand," was the response, "I meant to say 'between you and I and the lamppost.'"

Sillies

Portland Hoffa, of the "3's A Crowd" troupe, wants to make up a sentence containing the word "depressed" in this manner:

"Depressed of friends must part," and Master S. Rappaport offers a sentence with the word "Hoover" like this: "Hoover goodness sakes!"

Drama

When "Sweet and Low" opened, the producer, Billy Rose, decided to cut down the cast, omitting the unnecessary items. One of them was Eugene von Gronna, who, in Yurrop, is listed among the better pantomimics. The producer tried to get von Gronna disgusted with matters—so he would quit, but von Gronna, realizing how scarce bookings are these days, stuck it out.

He argued that his contract was a run-of-the-play agreement and would not resign. But Rose had no role for him. He finally trimmed expenses by dismissing the chap who was playing the hind legs of a horse—turning the assignment over to von Gronna, who is playing it!

Gag

Another of Fred Allen's anecdotes deals with the former producer who had lost his fortune in his latest venture. He took to peddling apples on a Broadway corner, but after two days he had his original dozen apples—not one attracting a buyer.

Finally, he picked up the 12 apples and sped towards a rehearsal hall.

"Where are you going?" said the cop on the corner.

"I'm going to send out 12 road companies of 'William Tell'" replied the magnate, as he disappeared into the carbon monoxide.

Sarcastically Speaking

It happened at the Pan-America Airways landing field in Miami. Three giant-sized planes were loaded with New Yorkers and others who were making one of those two and a quarter-hour voyages to Havana where the firewater is inexpensive and potent.

"Where are all those people flying to?" asked a Broadwayite.

"To Havana," acidly replied a debutante, "they are Americans—and they are going to Havana to celebrate their Independence."

A Form of Criticism

One of the new re-penthouse owners urged his friends to suggest an appropriate name for the place. He said that he liked one he observed while traveling through the mountains, which was "Not So Lodge," but that he wanted something different.

"How about calling it," suggested a wag, "The Dew Droppe Dead?"

The Squelch Swelegant

Everyone has his or her particular sassy retort for the nosey. Lois Moran, of "This Is New York," goes a little mad when an office boy asks:

"What do you want to see Mr. Soandso about?"

Lois invariably employs Arnold Bennett's line:

"I don't know whether he wants you to know, but when I see him I'll ask him, and if he does I'll tell you when I come out."

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for Frank J. Wilstach's dictionary of best similes: Sir Arthur Wing Pinero: She was cast aside like a used bus ticket. . . . Henry L. Mencken: Readily as a prohibition agent takes a bribe from a saloonkeeper. . . . Philip Culkin: As unconvincing as the masculine mannerisms of a female impersonator after doffant his wig at the end of his act.

Judge: A handshake that feels like a bag full of mice and Helen Rowland's: Marriage is always a surprise to a man—like a blow in the dark or a telegram at midnight.

Merciless Truth

The redeeming feature about a streak of hard luck on Broadway is that it helps you find out which of your friends are.

LEAGUE'S OATH BARS LOYALTY TO COUNTRY

Officials Owe Allegiance Only to World Body, Undersecretary Explains

By KENNETH CLARK,
Universal Service Special Cable.

GENEVA, Jan. 7.—League of Nations officials who are now forced to subscribe to the oath of loyalty owe their duty and obligations to the League rather than to their native country.

This official interpretation of the League oath was given today by Yotaro Sugimura, Japanese undersecretary general of the League. Similar views are expressed by Arthur Sweetser, American acting director of the information section, and Dr. Benjamin Gerig, another American in the information section.

Sweetser, who became acting director of the league's propaganda activities when Pierre Comert, French director of the information section, left for a three-month tour of South America with Sir Eric Drummond, league secretary-general, declared:

"The oath cuts officials loose from obligations toward any country, since the duties of league officials are purely international, not national."

Although the league has been operating for more than 10 years without requiring officials to take a pledge of allegiance, Undersecretary Sugimura declared that the oath now imposed "affirms formally that the duties and obligations of secretariat officials are international."

Officials of the league payroll, prior to January 1, are not required to sign the oath. As to this, Undersecretary Sugimura explains:

"But that does not mean that officials heretofore have not been obligated to serve wholly the League's interest rather than any national interest.

LEAGUE ONLY MASTER

"While an official is on duty in the secretariat, he has but one master to serve—the League.

"We are seeking to build up a body of impartial and independent officials. The oath is in line with that purpose.

"Further, it gives the secretary-general control over the officials. However, this does not mean we must give up our love toward our own country. If, for example, an official thinks the League is pursuing a course detrimental to the best interests of his country, he has the recourse of resigning from the League."

The League oath, which must be taken by League officials who connect themselves with the League from January 1, 1931, onward, follows:

"I solemnly undertake to exercise, in conformity with Article I of the regulations, in all loyalty, discretion and conscience, the functions which have been intrusted to me as an official of the secretariat of the League of Nations."

ARTICLE ONE

The article one mentioned in the oath reads:

"The officials of the secretariat of the League of Nations are exclusively international officials and their duties are not national, but international.

"By accepting appointment, they pledge themselves to discharge their functions and to regulate their conduct with the interests of the league alone in view.

"They are subject to the authority of the secretary-general, and are responsible to him in the exercise of their functions, as provided in these regulations.

"They may not seek or receive instructions from any government or other authority external to the secretariat of the League of Nations."

British Battleship To Visit U. S. Fleet

PORTSMOUTH, England, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The British battleship Nelson will start today on a cruise during which she will visit the American fleet at Colon, Panama, February 23.

At Colon the Nelson will meet the United States battleship Texas, flagship of Rear Admiral J. V. Chase. The meeting, it is said, will be the first friendly one between British and American admirals in American waters.

Rabbi Herman Hailperin, of the congregation, is an amateur magician and a member of the Society of American Magicians. He is a personal friend of Mr. Thurston, an officer of the society.

Real Estate

Building construction in Emsworth for 1930 showed a gain of $471 over construction of 1929, according to George E. Zimmerman, building inspector of the borough. In 1930 permits were issued for buildings to cost $76,540. In 1929 permits were given for building to cost $76,069. The 1930 permits were granted as follows: Ten dwellings to cost $48,000; 15 garages to cost $8,630; eight alterations to cost $11,210, and two filling stations to cost $8,500. According to Zimmerman, 1931, will show a larger amount spent on construction in Emsworth due to the completion of the Ohio River boulevard, which will make the borough more accessible to the city.

Six members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board will leave the city tomorrow evening for Harrisburg to attend the inauguration of J. W. Cree, Jr., as president of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association. Cree is a member of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and served as its president last year. The party leaving for Harrisburg will be composed of James C. Wilson, John L. Walsh, Fred J. Hettling, L. T. Stevenson, C. Edward Keck and J. Roland Brady. After the inauguration Cree and Brady will go to Newark, N. J., for a banquet and meeting of the New Jersey Real Estate Association.

An improved property in Middletown road, Twenty-eighth Ward, has been sold by Leonard E. Merritt to Arthur Tetzloff for $8,500. The lot is 50x120 feet.

Applications for building permits follow:

PLANE CRASHES KILL 4, HURT 2

KINGFISHER, Okla., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Joe Frazier, 19, passenger, was killed and William Music, 20, an unlicensed pilot, was injured internally in the crash on an airplane here. Both youths lived here. They had just taken off and had gained an altitude of about 100 feet when the motor stalled.

Frazier was the son of G. W. Frazier, of Kingfisher, owner of the land upon which the discovery well of The Greater Seminole oil field was brought in several years ago.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Three men were killed and a fourth was probably fatally injured when the pilot, blinded by a dust storm, crashed his plane into a hangar. The dead were Salvador Nunez Fernandez, Manuel Fernandez and the pilot, Capt. Juan Carmona. The injured man was Everardo Yanez.

QUAKE ROCKS IDAHO TOWNS

McCALL, Ida., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A light earthquake which rattled windows and tipped over a coffee percolator in one home, shook this section yesterday afternoon.

Residents were unable to state the exact time at which they felt the shock, except that it was "about 2 o'clock." The shock was felt at Council, 25 miles southwest of here, and at Donnelly, 15 miles south of McCall, and across a ridge of mountains from Donnelly. It lasted about one minute.

CHURCH BOMBED IN TEXTILE WAR

DANVILLE, Va., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A church whose membership was drawn principally from non-union textile workers was wrecked by a bomb last night in the latest of a series of disorders growing out of a textile strike.

Flooring of the Penticostal Holiness Church was ripped up and a large hole was torn through the ceiling. The pastor said he had maintained a "hands-off" policy regarding the strike and knew of no reason why his church should have been attacked.

A policeman had been stationed at the church during service in recent weeks.

The disorders began last summer after non-union workers were allowed to replace striking union operators. State troops have been on the scene several weeks.

Gov. John Garland Pollard said today he would co-operate fully in investigation of the dynamiting.

The gas that makes your dollar go farther

the new ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH

JUST what is economy in gasoline?

First, there is mileage. You want a gas that will give you most miles to the gallon. On the open road . . . over hills . . . in crowded city traffic. ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH does that. Keep a record for a few days, and you'll be amazed at the high mileage you get with this sensational new motor fuel.

But there is more than just mileage to consider. Gear-shifting, for example. Running in second gear is costly; it burns up a lot of gasoline unnecessarily. ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH gives you so much power, flexibility and flashing pick-up that it virtually ends the gear-shifting nuisance.

Even more important, however, is ease-of-starting. If your car is slow to start with the motor fuel you are using . . . if you have to turn the starter over again and again, and the engine "dies out" on you several times before it finally snaps into action . . . you are wasting not only gasoline but your battery as well! ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH is famed even above other things for its qualities that make for quick-starting and a shorter warming-up period.

These are among the reasons that cause people to say ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH is the most economical motor fuel you can use. Even if it cost more, it would still pay you to buy it; but it sells at regular-gas price! It is the scientifically developed fuel for the modern automobile engine. Crystal-clear in color; with no unpleasant odor, a very important point if you drive a closed car. Try it today. Show your family that you can save money—and at the same time get better performance out of your automobile than ever before!

Radio presents a "Big Six" tonight in Lee Sims, Howard Marsh, Ruth Etting, Rube Goldberg, Luella Melius and Tampa, England's Court Magician.

Not for many days have we had such an imposing and varied lineup.

Theater goers will place Howard Marsh (WCAE at 8:30) as creator of the title role in "The Student Prince," as well as leading man of the original companies for "Maytime," "Sari," "Blossom Time" and "Show Boat."

* * *

Ralph Federer, the best thing on ivories outside of the networks, is all aflutter over Sims' appearance on KDKA at 8 tonight.

* * *

Firing of revolvers to symbolize the awakening of the Christmas spirit, is the unusual way Rumanians, Serbians, Bulgarians and Russians of Pittsburgh will observe the Eastern religious rite in KDKA studios this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Does Ben Bernie have another name?—N. C.

Answer—His right name is Ben Ancel.

* * *

* * *

BILL HAY ALL RIGHT

A wire from Bill Hay, "Amos 'n' Andy" announcer, following his stumble in speech last night is self-explanatory:

"Thanks Darrell for your inquiry STOP Everything okey STOP My regards to Pittsburgh.
"BILL HAY."

YOUNG MEN IN RADIO

The average ages of all CBS employes is 27.5 years. The average for 22 department heads is 34.4 years.

Announcers, production men and studio managers all come under 30.

Even the age of the Columbia Broadcasting System itself is akin to the years of those who manage it. On January 18, Columbia will be just three years and four months old.

"BY THE WAY—"

The Dutch Minstrels are coming back under another sponsorship . . . . The announcer who is always telling you about cigarets, never smokes them . . . . He likes a pipe better . . . . Stephen Leyshon has many budding announcers and artists in his "music appreciation" classes . . . Stephen left a sick bed to announce "Sacred Songs" last night . . . . He had been suffering with acute ptomaine poisoning . . . . When a wiseboy inquired "Bad food?" Stephen replied, "No, bad toe" . . . . Helen Bell Rush, Sara Logan and Lou Kaufman spoke freely of the good old days when KDKA used to haul its artists to the studio in a bus and serve ice cream and cake after the program . . . . Remember? . . . . Vaughn de Leath has two more months with WTAM before returning to NBC in New York . . . . Guy Lombardo has signed up for another year at CBS . . . . Dennis King, star of "Vagabond King," entertains over WCAE next Wednesday night . . . . Out to become the Barnum and Bailey of the Air, the Happy Bakers announce they have signed Sigmund Spaeth as their glorified master of ceremonies . . . . Starting next Tuesday . . . . The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Were you to get a peek at the records of the broadcasters you probably would find that no song written in the last hundred years has been omitted from the microphones.

The songs of Gilbert and Sullivan, we'll bet our footrest, would be found in the lead in the count. Consistently down through the seasons they are aired by every conceivable voice, on every conceivable instrument.

Second place would have to be reserved for Victor Herbert, and if our ears are as reliable as we think they are, Stephen Foster would easily be third.

* * *

Foster's songs, now among the American classics, would be found in the repertoires of concert vocalists were broadcasting not in existence. Radio, however, has served to keep alive the compositions of Herbert and Gilbert and Sullivan. Their melodies, indeed, form the musical backbone of the microphone—the only songs which seem to satisfy every type of listener.

* * *

Were Victor Herbert alive today he would be, we believe, actively associated with radio the foremost musician of the studios, composing, directing, giving the authority of his advice on all musical matters.

* * *

Those "bright young people" who are forever dancing with tears in their eyes will receive no approving nod from B. A. Rolfe. To him the dance is humor. It should not be taken seriously. And because it shouldn't be taken seriously is perhaps the reason why Rolfe refuses to jazz the classics. Let's listen to him a moment:

"To change the masterpiece of a musical genius, so that people may dance to it, is sacrilege in its worst form. It is as if someone took a psalm from the Bible and made a fox-trot out of it."

HEAR PROTEST ON BUS LINE

Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission, yesterday heard the protest of Joseph A. Grimm against D. E. Saxon, who operates the Triangle Daily Messenger Service, transporting packages from Pittsburgh to Leechburg, Vandergrift and Apollo.

Saxon admitted he did not know until recently he needed a certificate from the commission and stated that he had applied for one. His application was heard. He asked that his permit, if granted, also include Indiana, North Vandergrift, Salina and Avonmore. Grimm held the new line was unnecessary, as he renders the same service.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Do Hubbies Take Advantage Of Working Wives?

Are mothers who seek jobs outside the home, in order to give their youngsters a better break, just "lazy shirkers," dodging their responsibilities as "decent wives"?

Dot says they are. She's been married herself, and she says that the place for any and all married women, regardless of their nature or necessity, is in the home. And plenty will applaud her snooty, self-satisfied statements. But as for me, I think that she and her smug sisterhood are plain poison. And, if my tonsils hold out, she'll know it.

Eve set off this explosion. Remember Eve—the discouraged, desperate young mother who was trying to raise her three babies on wretched food, in dark, dirty rooms, because her husband's weekly salary of $25 could provide nothing better? Try as she might—and how painfully hard she did try—Eve couldn't keep sickness away. Day by day the babies dwindled. If she could only go out and work!

She had a chance. Not a big job, but it would pay enough to rent that little place out of town where the babies could tumble in the sun all day under the kindly eye of an old colored mammy.

Oh, how Eve wanted that job. But her husband objected. Said it would hurt his pride to have his wife working. . . . And, besides, "his children needed their mother."

Dot Finds Fault

"Of course they do," cried Eve. "And that's just why I want to work. I can do a hundred times more for them in an office than if I stay here and watch them die for lack of milk and sunshine and clean air."

But that argument meant nothing to her Lord 'en' Master. So we told Eve to let him mutter and go grab that job.

Whereupon Dot barges in with her broadcast.

"My Dear Miss Martin:

"I've never written a letter of this sort before, but I think there has been too much nonsense written about working wives lately, and I feel that I must speak up on the subject.

"I am referring to the answer you gave that woman, Eve, who complained about being so sorry for herself because she had to look at her dirty house and take care of her own cross babies, and wasn't 'strong enough to take care of things.' I think it was ridiculous to tell her to go to work and hire someone to look after her kids. Any woman strong enough to work outside her home is certainly strong enough to clean things up inside it and take care of those young ones right, without whining. She makes me sick!

Quit Working

"I haven't had an easy life myself, so I know what I'm talking about. I lost my dad when I was 2 and my mother when I was 11, so you can see my life hasn't been any bed of roses. But I have always tried to go ahead and do what was right without crabbing and complaining about it.

"I began working when I was 16. Then I got married, although we didn't have a dime. And you can believe me that I didn't keep on working. I stayed home like a decent wife should, and attended to business. We had a baby the first year—and lost him. Then we took my little brother to raise. We only had $25 a week, too. But in six years we had a small home and a car. And I kept busy, like a wife should, cooking, sewing, etc. In fact, the days were not long enough for what was to be done. And we were so happy!

"When my husband died, I did go to work. But not while he was with us. It's ridiculous for a married woman to go outside her home. She should stick there and do the job God gave her to do. I'm not just raving about what I think. I'm telling you what I know. Few women get anything but trouble for taking an outside job.

"I know a woman who is a grandmother, who works seven days a week . . . six downtown, and one at home . . . in spite of the fact she's got a strong, husky husband. He hasn't worked since I've known them.

Intolerance Costly

"I know another . . . a cripple . . . who weighs about 85 pounds—and has a big, husky husband 10 years younger than she. She hobbles back and forth to work every day, while he lays around drunk.

"Well, I'm not sorry for these two dumb bunnies. They brought it on themselves and they'll have to like it!

"I could keep raving for hours on this subject, but I've got a date with a boy who'll never get this baby until he can take care of her. And I'm not lazy either! Here's loads of luck to the decent, 100 per cent wives who stay home where they belong!

"DOT."

I hinted that I wasn't strong for you, Dotty, but you haven't heard the half yet. And so you think that you alone have been the perfect model of a wife? And all ladies who don't follow your example are worthless hussies? All right. Now I'll tell one.

Lazy, restless women there are in the home and out. And many a marriage has been wrecked in such laziness and restlessness. But vicious intolerance such as Dot's is responsible for infinitely more tragedy than all the laziness on earth, rolled together. And you and your kind do more to make marriage a menace than a million wandering wives.

Was Lucky

As a matter of fact, Eve was no wanderer. She was a devoted mother, an intelligent wife, a brave, constructive citizen. And she and her kind deserve, and get the respect and gratitude of all right thinking people.

Whereupon I hear you hoot, "So you're belittling the good, conscientious wives who stay at home and do their duty?"

I'm doing nothing of the sort. I'm strong for home-biding wives. And I think the wife who can stay at home and be protected by a go-getter husband is the luckiest feminine on earth. But I also think that any woman who will stay at home to please Papa, when her children are sickening for lack of decent food and sunshine, is a contemptible slacker.

As for you, you were lucky enough to have your theories work. But you're neither level-headed nor warm-hearted enough to realize that everyone can't have your luck. Instead, you wrap your cloak of self righteousness about you and call 'em names.

Well, maybe you think that's the way to get popular. If so, just watch this column—and see how many will agree with you! Which means that this ring is open to all entries—and you've my permission to do your darndest to Dotty . . . "toe holds," "rabbit punches" and "flying tackles" not barred!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, January 8

A day of unusual activity and prosperity is the presage made from the dominant lunar transits, although the mutual configurations stress the importance of wresting this good fortune from the fates of hard work, diligence and steadfastness in responsibility. With these and wariness as to subtle betrayal, there should be promotion, increase of fiances, definite and substantial gain in many directions, especially for elders.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of splendid progress, with advancement, gain and profit from many sources, but mainly as the reward of merit, good hard work and dependability. Be on guard against duplicity, and refrain from hasty decisions and signing contracts. Elders benefit.

A child born on this day should have excellent equipment for success and advancement in life, being industrious, stable and talented, although posessing a caustic or sarcastic tongue, which may elict secret enmity and opposition.

A Time Saver

One housewife who has two different sizes of beds, twin and double, has solved the problem of telling her sheets apart by folding the large ones in squares and folding the smaller ones in oblongs. They are put away in this form and she can tell at a glance just where each sheet belongs.

Fay King Says She Dotes on Table Cloths, but Is Silent on Subject of 'Eats'

By FAY KING

I simply dote on my table and table cloths.

My table is only a folding card one, 32 inches square, but such a perfect size for finding material to make table cloths.

I never have a regular table-cloth, but buy squares of any bright, gay, pleasing material that will be cheerful.

I have had calico, chintz, velvet, sateen—every kind of a table cover you can find on the bolt or in remnants.

In summer I like crispy flowered patterns. In winter I like deeper warmer shades.

When I have nothing else to shop for I scout around for a new table-cloth, which means a yard of some pretty material to be hemmed.

Madge Prepares for a Shock as Noel Recites Letter

I had succeeded in my purpose of diverting Noel's mind from the terror of his father which had obsessed him during our ride from the farmhouse to the city. Anger at me for my doubt of his reaction to his father's letter to him, mingled with astonishment at my apparent knowledge of its contents had effectually roused him.

"Sit down, Noel," I said calmly. "I do not know the contents of the letter. But knowing what was in Mary's, and also knowing your father, to say nothing of observing your peculiar reaction to it, I have not found it hard to conjecture the contents. Forgive me for my apparent doubt of you. I really didn't think that you would believe any accusation against Mary, especially one brought by so prejudiced—almost crazed—a person as your father. But don't you know that Mary has an especially keen mind, and she knows that you received a letter from your father. She also knows that your demeanor toward her has been changed ever since."

"Oh!" Noel breathed. "Does she think that? My little love! Does she think I would believe anything an angel would say against her, let alone a—"

He did not finish the comparison, and the next instant changed it into an appeal—"Dear Mrs. Graham, say she doesn't think that?"

"She never has told me so," I said truthfully, "but she has been very depressed ever since those letters came. Her own contained a threat of continued disinheritance for you and also interference with whatever plans for earning your living which you might have. She has felt perhaps that she ought to give you up, but never because of your father's offer to her."

"May I tell now what was in my father's letter to me?" Noel asked abruptly. "He solemnly adjured me never to reveal its contents, but I did not feel bound by any duty to him, and—I do not fear him as much as I did, now that you dear people are guarding Mary so closely. I never feared him for myself."

"We all know that, dear boy," I assured him, my pulses quickening at the prospect of learning the thing which had puzzled us all so sorely. "And tell me at once what your father said to you."

"I told you I could repeat every word of it," the boy returned, "and I think that will be the best way to tell you. He began it, as he always used to: 'Dear Noel,' and then went on—

"'It depends upon yourself whether this shall be the last time I ever address you in these terms, or, indeed, in any terms at all.

"'When I left the city I intended never to see your face again. You are of my blood, you have known my long chafing and humiliation under the bar sinister of my birth, the injustice which prevented my belonging by law as well as by birth to the royal house of Transvania. You know also the unhappy romance of my young manhood, when the King of Transvania took from me (without knowing it was his cousin he robbed) the beautiful princess whom we both loved. You know these things, and yet when the opportunity came for you to regain part of what I had lost, when you could have married the Princess Olina, daughter of the Queen whom I loved so long ago, you flouted my wishes, made a mockery of the betrothal which the Princess herself had made, and flaunted your love for that little baggage, Mary Harrison, who has no right to be.'"

The boy stopped, his face ashen and looked at me with tortured eyes.

"I can't repeat that," he said.

"You don't need to," I told him I can well imagine what it was. But I marvel at your memory."

"Of course, every word is not exact," he said, "but I read it over at least 10 times before I burned it."

I urged him to go on.

"'But I cannot forget,'" the boy went on with the repetition of his father's cruel letter, "'that you are my only son, the only thing I have to love in the world. I cannot give you up so easily, cannot believe that you will thwart the only wish I have expressed to you. Therefore, I have humiliated myself to write this letter, this appeal to you.

"'First I shall tell you what I have offered Mary Harrison to relinquish all claim to you. I have told her that she is to receive $100,000 in cash and the restoration to my favor as a future Veritzen star. But I made the condition that she was to make you think it was for some other reason that she gave you your freedom. I am writing this in full confidence that she will accept my offer, and I wish you to know the true reason for her perfidy toward you. No woman in the world is above a price of some sort. Remember that, my son.'"

Noel paused, and I wondered if he had seen the hot anger which had leaped to my eyes. So that was Philip Veritzen's opinion of all women, was it? I repeated the cynical, sinister sentence to myself:

"No woman in the world is above a price of some sort. Remember that, my son."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Keeping Body Resistance at Par

When the newspapers printed the report that his son had contracted tuberculosis, the sympathy of the whole nation went out to the President and to his family. Probably no disease is more universally feared. Practically every one of us has some personal reason for knowing its ravages — has had some relative or friend or acquaintance who has fallen a victim.

DR. COPELAND

The germs of this disease are so widely scattered through the civilized world that it is impossible to avoid all contact with them. Indeed, it is said that nearly all adults carry them about in their bodies.

The most common form of the disease is tuberculosis of the lungs. But almost any part of the body may be affected.

Under ordinary circumstances, fortunately, the lines of defense of our bodies are sufficient to withstand the assaults of these and other germs. We are in danger only when the resistance of the body is lowered by disease, overwork, long-continued strain of some kind, failure to get fresh air and proper food. Then it is that the germs get a foothold and begin their work of destruction.

If care is not taken, the course of the disease may be very rapid. But, on the other hand, if it is recognized in the early stages and given prompt attention, there is every prospect of recovery.

The earlier symptoms are indefinite in character. But they should attract attention to the fact that something is wrong. There is general weakness, irritability, loss of weight and of appetite, sometimes pain in the chest or back.

Complete rest, plenty of fresh air and sunlight, nourishing food, freedom from worry, are the chief factors in bringing about recovery. Some climates are especially recommended for one reason or another. But where it is impossible for the patient to be sent away, a suitable environment can usually be arranged in the home, or near at hand.

The family physicain is the one best able to advise what should be done. If the treatment is to be carried on at home he will give directions for protecting the health of the other members of the family as well as for the care of the patient.

Bear in mind that the disease is curable. If the patient will follow instructions there is every prospect of a complete cure.

Powder, cream and makeup should be carefully removed from eyelashes and evebrows by applications of clear, warm water. Neglected evebrows are no facial bargains. Brushing with brilliantine makes them shine and shimmer and aids the growth. The normal brow is back again. The plucked thread of a brow is as out of date as bustles.

Corns, calloused spots, bunions and ingrowing nails are the twinaing products of shoes that are not sufficiently large or properly fitted. Whenever or wherever there is pressure there is bound to be trouble. When toes are huddled, all manner of foot ills appear to torment one's body and one's soul. It is possible to purchase shoes that are both comfortable and smart in appearance. One has but to search for them.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Erroneous Point of View

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other evening my girl and I went into an ice cream parlor and gave our order. After we gave the order, my sister and my future brother-in-law came in and were seated at a table back of us. I think that it was up to my future brother-in-law to offer to pay for our check, but he didn't offer and my girl friend and I walked out. I was ashamed to face my friend after this incident, because in my opinion he was cheap. Please solve this problem for me. E. G.

Please don't mind if I frankly say I don't think that you have any real basis for your feeling about this, and I don't think that you have any right to regard your brother-in-law as "cheap." Why in the world should he pay your check? He had nothing to do with it, and he was quite right in not even suggesting that he pay your check. He did exactly right, the dignified thing and the thing that you should take for granted. Please revise your point of view on this, for it will mean you will see more clearly, too, on such occasions in the future. As a matter of fact, there is more "cheap" quality in your point of view than in your brother-in-law's.

Unnecessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Does it make any difference as to how long before her marriage a girl announces her engagement?

2. Is it necessary for her to have an engagement ring at the time the engagement is announced? B.

1. No. This entirely depends on convenience.

2. No. Usually the girl does have her engagement ring at this time but it is not necessary. As a matter of fact, it isn't necessary for her ever to have this ring, if she doesn't wish to.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should learn all about Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 170 Varick St., New York, N. Y.

AIR MAIL LINE HERE DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Air mail service between Pittsburgh and Washington is to be held up at least until July 1.

Earl B. Wadsworth, superintendent of air mail in the Postoffice Department, said today there is no money available for extension of the present Pittsburgh-Cleveland route either to Washington or Norfolk. Inauguration of service between the Capital and Pittsburgh will have to wait, he said, enactment by Congress of the Postoffice Department appropriation bill, which provides $184,506 for establishment of a Pittsburgh-Norfolk route.

There has been some talk of a possibility of beginning air mail service between the Capital and Pittsburgh through extension of the Pittsburgh-Cleveland line. The proposed branch to Washington would be longer than the parent or original route to Cleveland and for that reason a question arose as to whether the Washington-Pittsburgh line could be classified as an extension and placed in operation through an executive order of Postmaster General Brown without waiting for Congress to pass the appropriation measure.

Rebels to Disarm If Marines Leave

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Pablo Jose Zepeda, Mexican representative of the Nicaraguan insurgent, Agustino Sandino, today gave the press the text of a long telegram which he said he had sent to President Hoover asking withdrawal of United States Marines from Nicaragua. The message said, among other things:

"Twenty four hours after the State Department announces withdrawal of Marines from Nicaragua we will disarm."

GRAFTON, W. Va., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The pouring of oil into a stove in an effort to start a fire resulted today in an explosion and fire that destroyed the East Grafton yard offices of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Sleuth Follows Nose, Scents Robber

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Detectives should know about the case of Thomas McMahon, sleuth who follows his nose.

Someone stole $700 worth of gems and a bottle of perfume. Jasmine was the odor. He got a bottle, and, taking a whiff to familiarize himself with its smell, set out on his investigation. In a flat he found a number of men, one of whom, the police said, had on him the odor of the tell-tale perfume. He was arrested. So were his five companions. Loot from recent robberies, amounting to $2,000, was recovered.

STOGIE FRAUD MEN FINED

Three officers and a manager of the Library Cigar Stores, Inc., accused of retailing stogies in containers of another brand were fined a total of $6,500 by Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal District Court today. The four men were placed on parole for a year.

William R. Finn, president, was fined $2,400; N. S. Gesler, manager, $500; Samuel Finn, Jr., $1,500; Nathan Rudick, $600, and the corporation was fined $1,500. The corporation, according to the complaint, retailed the stogies in their stores on the North Side.

REVOLT LEADER BELIEVED ALIVE

RANGOON, Burma, Jan. 7 (AP).—Officials today expressed the belief that Burma's man who would be king, reported killed in a battle with British troops January 3, was still alive.

They thought that the mysterious leader of the descent revolt in which many lives were lost escaped when his bamboo palace in the wilds near Thayrawaddy was captured and destroyed by British troops.

There still, however, was no explanation of the blond Burman who was found dead, dressed in robes of peacock dark, when the troops finally entered the rebel stronghold.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 7.—(AP).—Fifty-three thousand dollars in $1,000 bills were confiscated by the government here today from a safety deposit box to satisfy an income tax judgment against Reece B. Brown, of Spokane, Wash.

The judgment, amounting to $110,000, had been obtained by the government against Brown in Spokane on a charge of evading income tax.

She was reported in a perilous position. A French gunboat left here for the scene and the American gunboat Guam proceeded to her assistance from Hankow.

Two months later, he alleges, Mrs. Stifel took his wife from their home at 4805 Ellsworth avenue. Since then, she has been forcibly detaining her, the writ avers.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 7.—(AP).—Flying through rain and sleet, Barnes H. Warburton, Jr., arrived here from El Paso on his "round the world by sea and air" journey.

After a stay of a month or six weeks here, Warburton planned to fly to Vancouver, then ship his plane to Shanghai, and go from there to England via French Indo China, India, Turkey and Continental Europe. He expected to be back in New York by September.

Elisabeth Rethberg, Metropolitan Opera soprano whose fame as the perfect singer has long preceded her, gave a very comprehensive recital in Syria Mosque last night. Rethberg's method is so legitimate, avoiding all stage tricks of so many singers, that it took some time for her audience to realize what a fine musician she is to warm up to her singing, and finally to demand encores. The singer herself would be the last to say that she is perfect, but no one can deny that she is an outstanding musician among singers. Her voice is extremely youthful and clear. It does not lack dramatic qualities, but is most attractive in songs of purely lyric character, where her command of bel canto is an everlasting satisfaction and delight. In listening to Rethberg one wanders strangely from the text and follows intently the music itself, for there she overlooks no nuance to make the meaning of the composed as certain as would a pianist or violinist.

Of the three operatic airs the prayer from Weber's "Freischutz" was surely the greatest. A sweetness pervaded the group of English songs, among which Griffes was once again honored. The five German classics which followed were each a gem in its genre, extra praise, perhaps for Strauss' "Staendchen" for the splendid tempo in which Rethberg can sing it.

The old English "My Lovely Celia" proved again how little we have ever improved in several centuries on good English songs. It was the first of the encores. Brahms' "Vergebliches Staendchen," his "Wiegenlied" and "Von Ewiger Liebe" by request, three songs of totally different moods, were projected on their musical merits. Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song" has been too long absent from our programs, and was most welcome in its simple interpretation.

The Tuesday Musical Club presented Bruce Simonds, pianist, on the occasion of their artist recital in Soldiers Memorial Hall yesterday afternoon.

The program, though conventional, was excellently chosen, presenting an unfamiliar work of the English Bach and of the Spaniard De Falla. The juxtaposition of the Mozart and Schumann variations was interesting, especially in the player's treatment of them; the classic Mozart was finely musical, the romantic Schumann became studies in design, losing thereby much of their majestic expression.

The Bach Caprice was quite attractive, as a historic study it proved how free piano playing had become in one generation after the great Bach, but Simonds' playing proved a nice understanding of the dynamics, and carried out the program of the piece without over-emphasis—the departure of his beloved brother, the post-horn call furnishing the theme for the closing fugue.

Of the beloved Mozart Sonata, the minuet was in purest style, the march never crept beyond its true bounds in tone, and only here and there did a moment of sentimentality drift into the variations. Popular Debussy and Chopin works closed the recital.

Parley Slated on Postoffice Traffic Problem

6,300 CITY TAX APPEALS DECIDED

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

Vin Barnett, Luke's son, is back in town from Hollywood after having had small parts in a couple dozen movies. Vin hadn't been in town long before he, with Will Mahoney, the comedian, as an accomplice, scared the wits out of a singer in the "Vanities." Vin convinced this singer that he was wanted to explain the disappearance of Justice Crater in New York and the singer ran and stumbled out of the theater in fear.

While he was fleeing, Vin thought he would extend the scare to one of the show's beauties, Gracie Worth. Miss Worth remembered, but Vin forgot, that they had met in New York several years ago.

After Miss Worth had wept artificial tears under Vin's cross-examination, she suddenly straightened up, yelled, "All right, girls," and a dozen chorus girls popped on Vin and gave him the kind of shaking up which only chorus girls can give.

Add note of the times: Lawyers who specialize in divorces are complaining. They're complaining that not enough people are applying for divorces, and, consequently, the lawyers' fees are suffering. The barristers agree that in—er—less prosperous times, there are fewer divorce actions, especially since most divorce suits are started by women, who can't afford it.

The married people of this great country owe it to the legal profession to sue each other for divorce. If you have been planning to seek a divorce, our advice is: Do it now. What's wrong with this country is that men and women who can afford divorces are hoarding their money when they should be in divorce court charging cruel and barbarous treatment or something. It is not too late to start a Christmas savings account, neither is it too late to add to your New Year's Resolutions: I resolve, during 1931, to get a divorce. (If you are not married, it is apparent that you cannot get a divorce, but if you are a real patriot you will get married immediately.)

* * *

The Town 40 years ago, as seen by the ads: Charlie Weigold was selling bedroom suites for $13 in his store in Market street. . . . McCarthy's at Sixth street, near Penn avenue, was featuring shell oysters and clams . . . . Milligan's wholesale liquor store at Smithfield and Carson advertised Cincinnati beer . . . . The Pittsburgh Dental Parlors in Penn avenue were pulling teeth for 25 cents. . . . and W. J. Wright insisted he had the only chop house in the city at No. 2 Masters alley . . . . Wise's had a five-and-nine store at 402 Market street. . . .

* * *

For conversation's sake we asked a man the other day how he enjoyed Christmas and he grunted and said he didn't enjoy Christmas at all. He said his sons and daughters and his wife gave him nice gifts and his bills this year weren't as terrible as last year's, but he didn't enjoy Christmas because he didn't have any Tom and Jerry. He couldn't get any rum or brandy of repute, and he refused to use inferior stuff, so he did without. He says that's what's wrong with prohibition—a fellow can't have good Tom and Jerry around Christmas. We told him we had heard that certain speakeasies were having Tom and Jerry, but he said he'd be darned if he'd go to a speakeasy for it. Besides, he said, the speakeasies probably charged for it, whereas in the days of Newell's and Hammel's and the old beer gardens in the market the proprietors were gracious enough to ask a man to have his Tom and Jerry on the house. He said his biggest complaint against prohibition was the speakeasy.

SEEK TO AVERT U. S. BUILDING TRAFFIC JAM

Committee Calls Session as Ramp Plan Fails; Bridge Offers New Complication

A meeting for consideration of steps to bring about a solution of the threatened traffic tangle at the proposed $8,000,000 Federal Building here, will be held by the Better Traffic Committee tomorrow. The meeting was decided upon after the Treasury Department shelved the Grant street ramp.

Another factor, in the form of the Washington street foot bridge, has entered the problem of solving the vehicular traffic problem for the new building, Frank L. Duggan, general chairman, said. An ordinance is pending in City Council for the relocation of the bridge, to permit the erection of the postoffice.

The new location selected for the bridge, due to lack of information heretofore as to the ground layout of the new structure, has been placed at a point that would conflict with the Grant street ramp project.

Additional studies of the traffic conflicts which will be caused by the Treasury Department's proposed left turn from Seventh avenue into the new building are being prepared for the meeting by the Bureau of Traffic Planning, City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre said.

DAMAGE SUITS ASK $50,000

Mrs. Caroline E. Crowley, of Irwin avenue, has filed suit for $35,000 damages in Common Pleas Court against the Allegheny Basket Company, charging she suffered a broken leg and other hurts when she stepped in a hole in the floor of the company's building, 1228 Irwin avenue, last August 6.

Claiming to have fallen from top to bottom of a stairway in her home when the top step broke, Mrs. Martha Smith, 6422 Marchand street, has filed suit for $15,000 damages in Common Pleas Court against Martha Steele Littell, owner of the premises. The accident occurred May 18, 1929, when Mrs. Smith says her head and back were injured.

A verdict of $5,100 was awarded by a jury in Common Pleas Court to Mary Pruszynski, Lawrenceville, who sued the Pittsburgh Pie Company for $25,000 because of injuries received when she was knocked down by a truck of the company when she was crossing Butler street at Thirty-seventh street, May 3, 1929. Her head and back were injured.

Homestead and city police arrested him in Homestead December 19. They allege he dropped a handkerchief filled with fake quarters when the officers took him in custody.

ROWLEY DENIES DEFRAUDING WIDOW

Told to Use Her Stocks to Save Own, He Declares; Lost $100,000 in Crash

E. H. Rowley, stock broker and former artificial leg maker, took the stand today in his trial in Criminal Court, charged with fraudulent conversion by Mrs. Gertrude S. Warren, of 316 Sheridan avenue.

Rowley testified he had been instructed by Mrs. Warren to use her stocks and profits, if necessary, to save himself from loss. Asked why he could not produce the letter he said he had received from her he replied:

"I didn't expect that after all I had done for her I would be dragged into court."

Rowley testified that he suffered a paper loss of $100,000 in the stock market crash and that $6,000 profits in a General Motors stock sale belonging to Mrs. Warren was also lost.

Rowley is the father-in-law of William Larimer Mellon, Jr., whose elopement with Miss Grace Rowley more than a year ago was revealed recently on the eve of their wedding.

PRINCIPAL RETURNED

Late yesterday, Mrs. Warren, testifying as to stock dealings with Rowley, said that after her stocks had been sold and her $5,000 principal returned, she told him to keep her profits rather than sacrifice his investments.

In her direct testimony, Mrs. Warren said she became a client of Rowley in 1927, when he purchased $5,000 worth of A. M. Byers' Company stock, from which she realized $1,000 profit. Continuing her testimony, she said:

"After paying me the profits, Mr. Rowley then invested the original $5,000 in General Motors stock. He was buying on margin, and was using his own name, and his own account. I knew this. Later he said he would buy 50 shares outright, and that he would send me the profits."

BROKERS' RECORDS

According to the testimony and records of Moore, Leonard & Lynch, the brokerage office with which Rowley dealt, the General Motors stock was sold for $11,093.15 January 19, 1929, and $5,000 was sent to Mrs. Warren in Bloomfield, N. J., where she was then living. The balance was never paid, Mrs. Warren contends.

Mrs. Warren admitted receiving dividends from her General Motors investment. In December, 1928, she got $125; January, 1929, $250, and July, 1929, $200. Mrs. Warren also admitted that Rowley had charged her no commission, although she had urged him to do so.

JOB CENSUS AID SOUGHT HERE

Aid of the Chamber of Commerce in the forthcoming special unemployment census was asked by W. M. Steuart, director of the Census Bureau of the United States Department of Commerce, in a letter to President James Rae of the chamber.

G. A. Doyle, chairman of the chamber's research and statistics committee, said 120,000 children in public and parochial schools will be asked to prepare their parents for the visit of the enumerators.

Taking of the census, according to information received at the Chamber, will differ from the decennial population tabulation only in that enumerators will confine questions to employment or unemployment. They will ask the name of each person in the home who works for pay, the kind of work the individual does and the particular industry in which he or she is employed; whether or not he is working at present, when he worked last, the length of time of his last job; whether he is able to work, how long he has looked for a job, and whether he has been in Pittsburgh more than four months.

ASSESSORS' RULINGS IN MAIL

Reductions Allowed Where Levies Were on Amounts Over Market Valuations

More than 6,300 answers to tax appeals including a number of reductions in assessments have been mailed to city taxpayers. The books for all sections of the city with the exception of the First and Second wards have been closed, according to Chief City Assessor Thomas C. McMahon.

Wards particularly affected by increased assessments were the Twelfth, Homewood; the Nineteenth, including Brookline, Beechview and Mt. Washington; the Twentieth, including Sheraden and the West End; the Twenty-eighth, old Chartiers Township; the Twenty-ninth, Carrick, and the Thirty-second, Overbrook.

DECISIONS VARY

Early reports from taxpayers who had filed appeals in these districts indicated the decisions were mixed. Each property was examined on its merits by assessors, and reductions were made in cases where it was shown the assessment was higher than the market value of the property, the assessors said.

A number of appeals were refused in Mt. Washington and Brookline according to leaders who have been pressing the fight against increased assessments. In some cases another appeal will be taken before the assessors, sitting as a board. If this fails, it is possible to make an appeal to court within a 30-day period.

FAIRNESS SOUGHT

City assessors have worked long hours considering the individual appeals. McMahon declares every effort has been made to arrive at assessments fair to the taxpayers in all sections.

City tax collections are proceeding smoothly as the result of the new system of information booths installed in the lobby of the City-County Building. Large crowds are being handled without congestion.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

We got a powerful government, brainy men, great organizations, many commissions, but it took a little band of 500 simple country people, who had no idea the were doing anything historical) to come to a country town store and demand food for their wives and children. They hit the heart of the American people, more than all your senatorial pleas, and government investigations.

Will Rogers

Paul Revere just woke up Concord, these birds woke up America. I don't want to discourage Mr. Mellon and his carefully balanced budget, but you let this country get hungry and they are going to eat, no matter what happens to budgets, income taxes or Wall Street values. Washington mustn't forget who rules when it comes to a showdown.

Yours, WILL.

THREE YOUTHS ROB STORE, STATION

Authorities Still Seeking Thieves Surprised Looting Bakerstown Postoffice

Two youthful bandits held up the Standard Gasoline filling station, Penn and Hays avenue, Wilkinsburg, early today and kept the night attendant, Louis J. Gal, of 514 Rosedale street, Pittsburgh, at bay while they stole $21 from a cash register, Gal told Wilkinsburg police. They escaped in an automobile, according to a police report.

Three bandits obtained $10 in the holdup of the grocery store of Mrs. Dora Stoller, at 5226 Broad street last night. Mrs. Stoller was alone in the store when the trio entered and took the money from the register. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

Authorities of Allegheny and Butler counties today had found no trace of the two robbers who were routed while looting the general store of Carl Heckert, postmaster at Bakerstown, early yesterday.

Awakened when the burglar alarm in his store and postoffice across the road from his home was sounded, Heckert seized a revolver and shotgun and ran to the front of the place. When his wife turned on the light in the store from a switch in her home, Heckert fired the shotgun through the front window of the store. Both fled from the store and when Heckert fired again one fell to the ground, arose and staggered into an automobile in which his accomplice awaited him. County detectives, state highway patrolmen and troopers and city police were on the lookout for the car, but found no trace of it.

Land Bank Leniency Opposed by Mellon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP)—The House Banking Committee next week will consider proposals for temporary suspension of Federal Land Bank foreclosures in drought areas.

Secretary Mellon yesterday opposed any action to suspend foreclosures on grounds of constitutionality and the "grave complications" that would be introduced into operation of the system. Chairman McFadden of the banking committee said today he "opposed any action affecting the integrity of land banks, but if after investigation we find the situation as bad as some members here have represented it, we may have to take emergency action."

STOLEN PAPERS RETURNED

The proprietor of the Gorman grocery store, 916 Highland avenue, East End, who was held up by two armed bandits and robbed of $1,200 Saturday, was in possession today of papers taken during the holdup.

Apparently the papers, which included insurance policies, deeds and titles, were thrown from a passing auto.

During the holdup, in which Harry Gorman was forced to open the office safe, a request that the papers be left was ignored by the robbers.

FIVE LACK BAIL, HELD IN RIOT AT AMBRIDGE

Alleged Critics of President In Beaver County Jail After Hearing by Justice

Held for court on charges of inciting a riot as an aftermath of an unemployment demonstration in front of the Ambridge Municipal Building, four men and a woman were in the Beaver County Jail at Beaver today in default of bail. The quintet was arrested Monday night when one of their number was alleged to have made disparaging remarks about President Hoover.

The prisoners, Edith Bristoe, 21, of 611 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh; George Bailey, 21; Paul Karsich, 22; Frank Roberts, 22, and Joseph Koletich, 34, all of Ambridge, were given hearings before Justice of the Peace J. V. Lewis, of Ambridge, yesterday. Each was held in $500 bail on the riot charge and fined $10 and costs or 10 days to jail on a charge of disorderly conduct.

'DOUBLES' HIT POOLS HERE

The old favorite of the "numbers" operators—a double—cropped up on yesterday's New York Stock Exchange total sales figures, but it was 066—a heavily-played number.

It was the second heavy hit in two days. While Monday's 870 took the "big shots" for big sums, yesterday's 066 used discretion, nicked the racketeers for not-so-much, by virtue of 300-1 odds offered on doubles.

Because yesterday's figure was a double and because so many doubles have come recently, it was expected to slightly discourage prospective customers of the pool operators.

Pools yesterday reported play fair and stronger as the public grew less suspicious of the Stock Exchange total daily sales as basis for their gamble. A few suburban operators, who had been paying 600-1 on the 280 doubles and triples, as well as on the 720 six-way numbers, diagnosed a slight fall in their income as a normal reaction of a normal public against the concerted cut to the 300-1 odds, announced Sunday.

MANY FROCKS REACH FASHION SUCCESS THROUGH PIN-TUCKS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The charm that can be tucked into a tuck has never been more eloquently demonstrated than this season when the smartest frocks have arrived at their chic through a series of pin-tucks and nothing else. Most of us are well aware how effective a touch of pin-tucking may be, but it is a revelation to find beautiful frocks with a most decorative air that rely merely on strategically placed groups of these tucks to achieve the right effect. Pin-tucks and other hand work of this order give that air of expensive simplicity that should be the ultimate goal of every frock that is designed to do full service throughout a season. And that is exactly what frocks of this type can do. Of course the line must not be too severe and a tailored look is not essential or desirable. But still there must be an absence of non-essential touches and the line must be clearly defined. This may seem like a tall order, but the dresses shown by good houses generally manage to encompass these qualifications, for fashion-wise women insist on them.

* * *

WORTH IS A NOTABLE creator of the simple frock of almost startling chic and a glance at the afternoon frock shown here will bear out this statement. It is of black crepe de chine in a very heavy quality, ideal for a dress of this genre. Pin-tucking is used most effectively on the sleeves and between the godets of the skirt. There is a knotted handkerchief collar and a crush belt that fastens with a motif in red and green embroidery, a most welcome touch of contrast to the rest of the frock.

* * *

WORTH MADE THE EVENING frock here sketched for Mrs. George W. Stone, wife of the naval attache at the American embassy. It is of heavy black georgette and the diagonally tiered skirt is draped spirally. The back of the low-cut bodice is loosely draped in cowl fashion. A large motif of silver embroidery trims one side and the front of the frock.

BANK EMPLOYE KILLS SELF

Alexander Raccak, 45, of 1834 Pioneer avenue, Beechview, died today in St. Francis Hospital from a pistol wound in the head, self-inflicted, according to the coroner's report.

An employe of the Pennsylvania Savings Bank and Trust Company, deputy coroners said that Raccak shot himself at 11 o'clock Monday morning in the bank, located at Thirty-fourth and Butler streets.

H. T. Aufderheide, vice president of the bank, said:

"Of course we are very sorry that such an affair should take place, but so far as the bank or the bank's funds are concerned, it is of no effect whatever. Mr. Raccak dealt only with light and water bills. His record during his eight years with us is perfectly good. What his private worries were I have no way of learning."

ROBBERS LOOT STOCK ROOM

Robbers looted the second floor stock room of the A. W. Fraley electrical shop, 5008 Penn avenue, last night, police were told. Two radios, 27 electric irons, three percolators and five toasters comprised the loot, according to Fraley, who declared he believed it to be an "inside" job.

He said a police dog left in the shop would not have permitted a stranger to enter the place. The robbers pried off a gate in a rear courtyard, then jimmied a window on the rear of the storeroom. Nothing was touched in the store proper, all the loot having been taken from the second floor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(INS)—A charge of murder against John Cassieri, Brooklyn grocery clerk, was dismissed today. Police decided that when his wife, dying on a hospital cot, said her husband had killed her she did not understand the question to which she nodded an affirmative.

Cowboy Boots Halts Cabinet Business

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP)—An order blank for a pair of cowboy boots has momentarily disturbed the routine of the office of a cabinet member and army business in general.

On the top of a pile of after-holiday correspondence, Secretary Hurley found an order blank for a pair of cowboy boots, sent by a friend who wished to present the footgear to the secretary.

Once a cowboy himself, the secretary could not resist the temptation to accept. Work came to a standstill while he measured and remeasured for the right size.

Widow Wills Tyrone $100,000 Hospital

ALTOONA, Pa., Jan. 7.—(AP)—A bequest of $100,000 for founding a hospital in Tyrone is made in the will of Mrs. Adda M. Gray, which has been filed for probate. An estate of $200,000 was disposed of in the will and 96 bequests were made. Mrs. Gray's husband, Harvey M. Gray, left $50,000 to found a Tyrone hospital when he died.

Pennsy Boy Amazes Mother

"Frank's stomach was often upset and he suffered a lot from colds," says Mrs. M. Zuschlag, 2218 So. 66th St., Philadelphia. "He was feverish and his breath was bad. I found he was constipated.

"My mother used California Fig Syrup with us, so I decided to give Frank some. It surely surprised me to see how quickly it stopped his feverishness, cleared his breath and tongue, regulated his bowels; made him a strong and energetic boy again."

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, headachy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Give it at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor and it acts without griping or discomfort. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

For fifty years, doctors have endorsed this pure vegetable product. The genuine is always marked by the word California. Look for that when buying or you may get an imitation.

WINS WORTH MORE THAN RUN RECORDS

THE SYSTEM OF crediting pitchers according to the average number of earned runs scoring against them per nine innings is supposed to be the only true measure of a hurler's worth. But in the midst of most fans there is a question as to whether this grading from the standpoint of effectiveness can be accepted as showing actual pitching value. Some of them are old fashioned enough to insist that the real value of a pitcher is reflected by the number of games he wins. Pennants are won by games won and lost, and whether the flinger with an impressive earned run record, but who has a habit of pitching just well enough to lose is worth as much to his team as the mate whose earned run figure is less impressive but who consistently finishes on top.

Dazzy Vance

Look at Dazzy Vance's 1930 record, for instance. He led all the major league pitchers in effectiveness, allowing only 2.61 earned runs per nine innings, and was the only moundsman in either circuit with a mark under three. Yet he did little better than break even, having only 17 victories to his credit at the finish against 15 defeats. Bill Walker, who ranked third with 3.93, made the same record as Vance in games won and lost.

AS FAR AS earned run records were concerned, Benny Kremer of the Pirates was the leader of the National League circuit, but he won more games than he lost. Pat Malone, who was tied with him at 3.66 runs, won 19 decisions in addition to Kremer and Malone were more successful than Vance or Walker. Teddy Carroll and Ethan Blaine also had better records than French won more games than Dazzy, but Blaine with a record of [illegible] games won and lost, had a better earned run record than Carroll.

A parallel case to raise a question of pitching values is found in the record of Howard Craghead, the new pitcher obtained by Cleveland from Oakland in the Pacific Coast League. His earned-run average was 3.64 and in the matter of effectiveness he ranked fourth in his circuit. That sounds impressive, but the other side of the book discloses that Craghead lost more games than any other pitcher in the league. He was charged with no fewer than 22 defeats, while winning only 21 victories so that he actually finished under the .500 mark. His club didn't get fat on his earned-run record.

THE EARNED-RUN system was adopted because it was said the won-and-lost record did not tell the truth about pitchers. But it figures can lie in one direction they can lie in another.

One baseball man who is outstanding to be worth anything is President Bob Quinn of the Boston American League club. He says so in contending that Danny MacFayden, bespectacled thrower of the Red Sox, is one of the best hurlers in the big show, regardless of figures.

Bob Quinn

"I THINK ALL those records are the bunk," Quinn says, "even the earned runs per nine innings. How about the pitcher who is pitching a good brand of ball against a much better club than his own, and sees one of his infielders, who can't get off a dime, let a double-play ball skip through to the outfield and score two runs? That ball should have been gobbled up, even though no error can be charged because the fielder did not get to it, and a double play retiring the side without a run would have been the result. If an infielder goes for a ball and slips, the ball, ordinarily an easy chance, rolls on and officially goes for a base hit. The runs that score are labeled earned, just as in the case of the infielder playing on the dime who missed the easy double-play ball. I judge by the way they pitch in the pinches, how well they do when they have weak clubs behind them, how their courage keeps up in the face of bad support, and what judgment and brains they bring to their work. Paper records don't mean a thing."

JAPAN'S GREAT STRIDES in billiards will be signified when the next world 18.2 balkline championship tournament is held, for from present indications that country will have two representatives in the competition instead of only one as in the past. In addition to Kinrey Matsuyama, a newcomer named Akira Amada will be brought forward if he wins out in Japan's qualifying tourney, as expected.

Amada is said to be a real sensation at the balkline game. The fact that he won the 1930 championship of Japan is not so important as the impressive way in which he captured the title. He won every one of the five games he played, had a high run of 292, a best average of 100 and a grand average of 32.82, figures that spell a whole lot of promise.

IN RETURNING TO Washington and Lee as football coach after a term at Duke, Jimmy DeHart, former Pitt star, is assured that he will not be disturbed for at least two seasons in carrying out any plans he may have in mind.

For it is learned that DeHart's starting contract is for two years, covering 1932 as well as 1931, and Jimmy's friends are confident that at the end of that period the Generals will be glad to retain it. Cy Young, freshman coach at W. & L. in 1930, has already been appointed as Jimmy's assistant, and the latter is head coach for next fall.

Jimmy DeHart

OF COURSE, FISTIC championships can be lost only in the ring, and the attempt of the New York Boxing Commissioners to strip Max Schmeling and Mickey Walker of their respective heavyweight and middleweight titles will not alter the positions of those fighters in public opinion any more than it will change them in the ranking of the rival Queensberry authority, the National Boxing Association. A champion is a champion until he is licked. But at the same time, in the heavyweight end of the ridiculous situation that makes Schmeling and Walker champions in 33 states and just a couple of fighters in another, Schmeling cannot be said to have acted in good faith.

IT IS NOT the part of a boxing commissioner to assume the role of a matchmaker, but in the instance the New York board had a right to insist that Schmeling carry out the terms of an agreement made last year. For it was only with the understanding that he would meet Jack Sharkey again as a return match that Schmeling was given a title which he had not won in the ring.

Max is now deliberately running out of that agreement in order to meet Young Stribling in Chicago in June, and even though it may not be within the power of the New York Commission to take away his title it can hardly be denied that the commission has the right end of the argument. In the first place, the Sharkey-Stribling match, which Joe Jacobs insists should be staged first with the winner meeting Schmeling, was offered to Stribling for a December date and was declined, and in the second place, it is not for Schmeling to be dictating who shall be chosen to meet him for a title that was handed to him as a gift in a fight that saw him badly beaten by the man he now refuses to face.

IF JACOBS WERE really a smart business man, it would seem he would grab two purses instead of one by sending Schmeling against both Sharkey and Stribling, rather than insist that Sharkey and Stribling fight first for the privilege of meeting the titleholder. Possibly he shares the opinion held by many others, that Schmeling is good for only one big shot and that either Sharkey or

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: ABRAHAM LEVY SECURED ACQUITTAL FOR MURDER COMMITTED IN COURTROOM—Levy's client was Edward Divins, who, on June 27, 1892, shot and killed Max Clerget in the open courtroom during a session of the Court of General Sessions of New York City to avenge an outrage committed upon his sister. The murder was committed in full view of all the court officers, witnesses and the jury. Divins was placed on trial for murder in the first degree before Recorder Smyth and a jury on October 19, 1892. After deliberating for 1 hour, 20 minutes, the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty," and Divins was discharged by the court. (See: The New York Times of October 20, 1892, page 9, col 4.)

GERMAN PAPERS FLAY MAXIE

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—(AP)—There was little comment today in the German press on the action of the New York State Athletic Commission in withdrawing heavyweight championship recognition from Max Schmeling, German boxer, and what comment there was was adverse to Max.

Most of the newspapers merely contented themselves with bringing the news of the New York Commission's action to the German public, but the Zwoelfuhr Blatt devoted two pages to proving Schmeling was afraid to again meet Jack Sharkey.

"That he (Schmeling) tries to evade Sharkey this paper regards as a disgrace to German sport," the Zwoelfuhr Blatt said.

Then referring to his letter yesterday in the Berliner Zeitung, the paper continues:

"One doesn't know what to condemn more in connection with this latest blast of a world champion—his attempt to bluff the public or the haughtiness wherewith one who was helped to his position not by ability but by luck tries to center the spotlight upon himself."

The Borsen Courier also was outspoken in its condemnation of the German champion.

"We've seen the movie of the Schmeling-Sharkey fight," it said. "Every impartial observer must realize there was but one man in the ring—and that wasn't the boxer who afterward left the ring as world champion. We saw a marvelous technician and tactician who was giving a lesson in boxing to a greenhorn."

To that man, Sharkey, Schmeling must give an opportunity for revenge, the paper said, "if he wishes truthfully to carry the championship title."

Schmeling was in seclusion at the winter sports resort Garmisch-partenkirchen. At the hotel where he was stopping, The Associated Press was informed over the long-distance telephone that Schmeling is away on an excursion and it is not known when he will return.

Friedman May Coach Trojans, Penn or Yale

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The name of Benny Friedman, former Michigan all-America quarterback and professional football star of the New York Giants, has been mentioned in connection with coaching positions at California, Pennsylvania and Yale.

Friends said they understood he had talked with representatives of all three.

Friedman said today he had discussed coaching assignments with representatives of the University of California and several Eastern schools, but had signed with no one.

Morgan and Gallatin, the only undefeated clubs playing league soccer in Western Pennsylvania, will have to step out to keep their slates clean this week-end. Morgan will have Dunlevy for its opponent at the Bridgeville Speedway, and there is a feeling that Morgan will receive its first defeat in league warfare.

Gallatin, the Monongahela division, will have a local attraction with Victory Hill crossing the river to meet the league leaders. Gallatin cannot afford to lose any points with Hermitte only two points behind.

The Keystone League will stage two other games, Shannon going to Curry and Cecil to Primrose.

The national amateur cup commissioner has consented to Morgan putting back its game with Sons of St. George, of Cleveland, so the Shamrocks will appear here in the open competition a week from Sunday.

A meeting of the Keystone League is slated tomorrow evening at President Billens', at 7:30. The Panhandle League meets at Squire Smith's Tuesday evening.

The following games will be played in the Central League Saturday afternoon: Pierpont Motors at Clan Douglas, McArdle; Pittsburgh Rovers at Mesta Machine; Evans; Pittsburgh Celtics at Crafton Heights, Simpson.

N. Y. COMISH'S ACTION HELPS CHICAGO PLAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Chicago, it appears, owes the New York State Athletic Commission a rising vote of thanks. The commission, by stripping the heavyweight title from Max Schmeling, virtually has assured a title match between Schmeling and W. L. (Young) Stribling in Chicago next June.

Nor is that all the commission's action accomplished. It left, or so it would appear, Jack Sharkey in the role of "outstanding contender" in New York State, but with no one in sight for him to fight.

OFFERED $500,000

Although other boxing centers, Detroit, Jersey City and Philadelphia, for instance, have plunged in with offers for the serious consideration of Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, it was understood that Chicago held the inside track for the title bout and would get it.

Nate Lewis, Chicago promoter, several days ago offered Schmeling $500,000 to meet Stribling with the title at stake, and at the moment at least there seems no reason why the Teuton slugger should not accept. As for Stribling, he already has come to terms with Lewis.

As the situation stood today, it would take a complete about-face on the part of the state commission to save the bout for New York, and there appears no prospect of that.

The boxing solons declared the heavyweight throne vacant when Jacobs, on Schmeling's behalf, declined to sign immediately for a return bout with Sharkey. Jacobs offered to sign Schmeling to a contract calling upon him to meet the winner of a Sharkey-Stribling match or against Sharkey, if Stribling declined to meet the Boston Sailor.

SHARKEY IS GOAT

The commission has insisted that Sharkey, having beaten Stribling once, should not be called upon to meet him again. Now, after declaring the title vacant, the solons announced they would accept as champion the winner of a match between Stribling and Sharkey.

This the commission stuck to its guns in support of Sharkey's eligibility as outstanding contender, but the net result seems to leave Sharkey holding the bag. Stribling, with a Schmeling bout virtually assured him, in all probability will decline to meet Sharkey, and there's no one else for the Boston Sailor to meet.

Pa Stribling, W. L.'s father and manager, put it like this at Miami, Fla., yesterday:

"We'd rather fight for the National Boxing Association in Chicago and meet Schmeling, than meet Sharkey or any other contender in New York. Regardless of the action of the New York commission in withdrawing recognition from Schmeling as champion, he still is generally recognized as the champion and I see no reason why W. L. should meet Sharkey in New York or elsewhere."

CARNERA GO OFF

This attitude seems to dispose of the proposed bout between Stribling and Primo Carnera, at Miami, this winter. With Schmeling just ahead, Stribling hardly could afford to jeopardize his chances in the title match to meet Carnera.

Jacobs' refusal to sign Schmeling to a Sharkey match was dictated by his belief that the bout would be a financial failure. He was supported in this by William Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, who said he would not want to sign a Sharkey-Schmeling match now without some sort of preliminary build-up to arouse public interest.

N. B. A. SATISFIED

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The National Boxing Association will not stand in the way of a heavyweight championship fight between Max Schmeling and W. L. (Young) Stribling, in Chicago, or any other state within its jurisdiction if held this summer, President John V. Clinnin intimated today.

Although the N. B. A., parent body of professional boxing and wrestling in 34 states, is polling its members to decide if it should declare Schmeling's title vacated, Gen. Clinnin said a period of grace undoubtedly would be granted. Ten state commissions already have answered the poll, eight of them voting to vacate the throne and the two others voting for 30 and 90 days grace.

If the championship match is held at Soldier Field, Chicago, it may be the first 15-round battle since boxing became legalized in the state.

THREATENS TO SUE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Jack Kearns, manager of Mickey Walker, whose middleweight championship was declared vacant yesterday by the New York State Athletic Commission, has announced he will start suit at once against the commission for $1,000,000 unless it rescinded on the ground that its action was in restraint of trade.

He asserted the commission's action would prevent Walker from earning a living.

WINDSOR, Jan. 7.—Windsor kept its hold on second place in the International Hockey League last night by defeating the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, 3-1, in a grueling duel.

It was the Windsor team's first decision over Pittsburgh this season. Duguid, young center, and Baldy Northcott were the scoring stars for the Bulldogs. Northcott was playing his last game here, as he rejoins the Montreal Maroons in Toronto Thursday.

NORTHCOTT SCORES FIRST

Northcott opened the scoring a minute after the first face-off, on a play with Duguid and Phillips. After 43 minutes of scoreless battling, Windsor made it 2-0 early in the third period. Duguid got the goal on a pass from Northcott.

Six minutes from the finish Duguid broke up a Jacket rush and went in all alone to score again. In the final desperate rally, Tex White converted Field's pass to avert a shutout.

Serving the only three penalties meted out, the Jackets were on the defensive much of the first period. Gregg drew the first sentence a few seconds after the start and the Bulldogs immediately took advantage of his absence to score the only goal of the session.

Proudlock and Fraser later were banished, but Goalie Fisher made sensational saves to stop every Windsor rush.

Benedict and Fisher hogged the limelight throughout the second period, performing countless miracles in the way of saves to keep the teams scoreless.

GAME IS ROUGH

The game got rough in the last period. Bellemer and Smith drew penalties and Benedist was warned for deliberately breaking Field's stick when Whitey was in close after a loose puck.

Fisher	G	Benedict
Bartlett	D	Bellemer
Fraser	D	Brown
Ouellette	C	Duguid
Proudlock	W	Northcott
Gregg	W	Phillips

Bobby Angelo, former Grove City College star and last year with the Goldensons, literally put the Duquesne Lafayettes, four times winners of the Allegheny County championship, "on the spot" in an extra period battle at Columbus Temple last night and as a result Fintex today stands crowned first-half titleholders in that popular professional circuit.

Sinking a field goal in the last second of play, in fact just as the final whistle sounded, Angelo set the stage for the downfall of the Lafayettes by forcing the contest into an extra session. Buzz Leisenring, likewise a former Goldenson star and this year captain of the Fintex aggregation, completed the damage in the five extra minutes of play when he sank the winning points. The final score was 32 to 29.

RALLY TO WIN

The battle developed into one of those hectic affairs that usually characterize a contest between the two clubs. Facing the prospects of finishing in a triple deadlock for first place if they lost, the Fintex passers staged a brilliant comeback to snatch the game out of the fire.

The Lafayettes got away to what appeared to be a running start, but Fintex gradually wore down a big lead until it was within two points of a deadlock. Angelo's tying field goal came just as the whistle was sounded to send the capacity turnout of fans into hysterics. The victory sewed up the County League title for the victors and assured them of a place in the playoffs, provided a post-season series is necessary. If Fintex wins the second half crown no playoffs will be staged.

The Lafayettes went down fighting as a champion. They made their usual determined stand to force a three-way deadlock, but their efforts went for naught due to the brilliance of Angelo and Leisenring. Standing out in the fine showing of the defending champions was Joe Gubby, star guard of the Scarlet Hurricane. Gubby almost single-handed accomplished what his teammates failed to do.

Long's Sport Comment

Stribling will take him, with Stribling less likely than Sharkey to cut him up in doing so.

It looks like a little cut-throat game between New York and Chicago, with Chicago stealing Schmeling for a match with Stribling in retaliation for New York's action in blocking a Sharkey-Carnera bout in the Windy City last fall. Sharkey appears to have lost out both ways, first being kept out of a Carnera match and now being deprived of a chance to meet Schmeling. But the game itself will be the one real loser in the end if the rival promoters do not bring more sport and less other stuff into their operations.

Vince Dundee

WHEN VINCE DUNDEE, who defeated Buck McTiernan here recently, enters the ring in New York next Friday night to give Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, his first American test, he will be facing one of the finest specimens of European fighting man to visit this country in a long time, according to reports. Training camp callers have marveled at his arms, forearms, wrists and hands. His forearm, close to the elbow, is so developed that it measure one inch more around than his biceps, which are unusually large and splendidly proportioned. Muscles are developed all over him lik whipcords, but he is far from being musclebound. He has driving muscles that reach from his shoulders, and when in his gymnasium bouts with Pal Silvers and Izzy Grove he moved about on legs that were as solid as hard marble, every sinew was in play and he showed the grace and sureness of a man who knows his business thoroughly. It looks as if England may have sent us a real one this time.

DOLDE ANNEXES CHESS TITLE

Howard L. Dolde, of West View, who won his first Western Pennsylvania chess championship 18 years ago and who has won every West Penn tourney in which he has competed since that time, has added to his laurels by annexing the 1931 title. Although the annual West Penn tourney is not yet completed, the competition is so far advanced that the positions of the leaders—Dolde, first; G. Wallenius, second; Kalman Erdeky, third—cannot be changed.

H. L. Dolde

H. L. Dolde	7	1	1
G. Wallenius	6	1	1
Kalman Erdeky	6	1	1
E. Angren	5	2	1

SPORT VIGNETTES

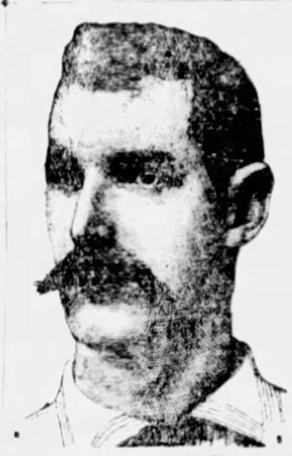
News dispatches a few days ago told of the death at Waterbury, Conn., of Roger Connor at the ripe old age of 73, and added that he was the "Babe Ruth" of his day . . . He starred with the New York Giants from 1832 to 1891 and later played with the Phillies and St. Louis . . . His best batting mark was .382, in 1885, and he always was above the .300 figure in an era when the lively ball was a nightmare yet undreamed . . . A likeness of him in his heyday appears with this article . . . It is taken from a group of pictures of the Giants of that time, all of them wearing mustaches except Mike Welch, the pitcher.

The game has changed considerably since the days of Connor and his mates . . . Not the least of the changes has been the passing of the upper lip mirsute adornment . . . John Titus, former outfielder of the Phillies, is generally credited with having been the last of the big league players to shave off his mustache and acquire that youthful appearance.

The first fight to be won on a foul in New York State since the commission there went on record last summer as refusing to recognize fouls cropped out last Saturday night, when Johnny Erickson was disqualified by Referee Jack Dorman for kicking Miki Gelb, the Hungarian featherweight, during the second round of their bout . . . Which incident brings up the point that there are many more fouls in the sport than mere hitting below the belt, although it is rare, indeed, that any of them are enforced . . . Among them are striking with the open glove, hitting over the kidneys or behind the neck with the heel of the glove (the rabbit blow) and stalling . . . Not to mention going down without being hit, holding and hitting, hitting on the breaks from clinches, prolonging clinches by refusing to break at the command of the referee, kneeing, gouging, heeling, mugging, kicking, biting and hitting an opponent while he is down . . . Also assistance from a second to a boxer who has been knocked down or out of the ring or entry of a second into the ring while a round is in progress, wrestling, butting, intimidation of the referee, coaching from the corners and wearing equipment calculated to injure an opponent or applying to the body or gloves any substance that might injure or handicap an opponent.

All of these fouls are incorporated in the various sets of rules that have been laid down from time to time to govern the conduct of boxing bouts with the idea of eliminating all unnecessary brutality from the sport and giving science and fair play an even break . . . Most of them call for a warning from the referee and disqualification if the offense is repeated . . . However, so lax have the referees become in deference to the bloodthirstiness of the average boxing fan that most of the points in the fouling code have come to be glossed over and forgotten as a general thing . . . In the old days, when the referees alone rendered the decisions, they figured the fouls against the men who committed them in their final reckoning when they did not disqualify the offenders . . . Nowadays, with judges getting first crack at the decision, they are inclined to overlook the fouls entirely if the referee does not penalize a boxer and permits the bout to go on to the finish . . . Which doesn't help the sport.

Within a few minutes after announcement was made yesterday that the New York Athletic Commission had stripped Max Schmeling of his world heavyweight title, "flashes" came over the wires from Miami, Fla., regarding a Young Stribling-Primo Carnera bout there next month and from Chicago stating that the stage was set for a Schmeling-Stribling fight there in June, while a diatribe by Schmeling against the New York commission was propitiously timed out of Berlin a few hours before . . . All of this activity was forecast in a news service story coming out of New York last Saturday night . . . In other words, the grand ol' ballyhoo is on in earnest . . .



ROGER CONNOR

Which is a reminder that Ike Dorgan's story of the ballyhoo of the fight game, revealing many of the late Tex Rickard's steamup tricks, begins in next Monday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph . . . Ike was Rickard's publicity director in his biggest fistic ventures and knows whereof he speaks . . . Incidentally, suppose some smart promoter should put on a Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera fight in New York for the heavyweight title, with the consent of the miffed New York commission, the same day Schmeling and Stribling were squabbling it out in Chicago—which fight do you think would draw the larger crowd?—HARRY KECK.

Handball Champ Beats Local Stars

Campolo to Meet Chris in Argentine

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Victorio Campolo, Argentine heavyweight, has announced he has accepted a match with K. O. Christner, of Akron, O., here early in March. Campolo said he intended to return to the United States and continue his title quest immediately after the match.

Friends Present Frank Carideo $1,000 Check

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The boys who "knew him when" and a good many who did not but who are glad to know him now, honored Frank Carideo, Notre Dame's quarterback, at a testimonial dinner last night. His friends and admirers from his home town of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and alumni and friends of Notre Dame, 650 in number, joined in the praise.

They presented Carideo a check for $1,000. The principal speakers were Mayor James J. Walker, of New York; Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, and Mayor Berg, of Mount Vernon.

Penn May Quit West Penn League

Displeased over the action taken by the West Penn League officials in depriving them of a victory over Y. M. H. A., the Penn Five passers threaten to withdraw from that circuit.

The Penn passers have made application for a berth in the County League, but the pro loop sponsors will take no action until the West Penn champs of last year withdraw from the amateur circuit.

NOVAK SEEKS 24TH K. O.

By HARRY KECK.
Sports Editor.

That is the ring record of Frank Novak, 22-year-old 192-pound heavyweight, of the North Side, who boxes Chet Johnson, of Olean, N. Y., in one of the two 10-round bouts on the double windup card at McKeesport tomorrow night.

Frank Novak.

It is almost a year since Novak turned professional after winning the Western Pennsylvania amateur championship. His main ambition just now, aside from going as far as he can in the fight game, is to wipe out a technical knockout defeat suffered in a bout with Chuck Taggert, of Butler, at McKeesport, last March, in his third start as a pro. A punch cut his mouth so badly that his manager, George (Cy) Siebert, tossed in the towel rather than let him go up for the third round, and his opponent wasn't in much better shape at the time. Frank's only other defeat as a professional was by Dan Gallagher, of the West End, at the Moose Temple recently. Gallagher won the decision in a six-round bout, but Novak more than evened the score when he stopped Gallagher in three rounds in a return bout.

CARDS COMPLETED

Johnny Kerr, of New York and Billy Brent, of the Hill, box the other 10-round bout at McKeesport, with Charley Crovatta, of Uniontown, making his professional debut against Eddie Litz, of Warren, Pa., in the second bout and Tony Marino, of McKeesport, and Georgie Sotak, of Irwin, boxing the opener.

Promoter Apples Meyers, of the Moose Temple, downtown, has completed his card for his Frankie Chatterton-Eddie Brannon show Friday night by signing Red Miller, of Cleveland, to box Marcus Noll, hard-hitting local Negro southpaw, in the second bout and Terry Waner, of the North Side, to oppose Sammy Burns, of the Hill, in the opener. Waner recently defeated Sammy Paris at the Moose, while Burns substituted for Frankie Portland and won over Eddie Guba there last Friday night. Muscle Scholes, of the North Side, and U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, featherweight rivals, meet a third time in the semi-final.

Upturn in Steel Industry Helps Share Market to Extend Gains; Rails Lead

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP.)—News of the expected January stirrings in the steel industry helped the share market further along the road of recovery today.

The financial markets generally were higher, with continued improvement in bonds. Stocks were active, as volume early in the day but the market turned irregular as profit taking cropped up here and there after middle. Advances were moderate.

The week's statistics indicated that the seasonal expansion of activity following the year-end shutdowns has thus far more than filled the most optimistic expectations. Iron and steel production put at 41 per cent of capacity, which takes care of the December slack and puts activity in that line the level of the first of November.

American Metal Market says that steel [illegible] declined to view the situation conservatively, remembering the mistakes of a year ago. It emphasized that the buying of this conservative character, being in small lots for quick shipment, scarcely are thus far enough to determine whether the increase means replenishment of stocks after a very drastic liquidation or is the beginning of a movement of more lasting character.

The strength of the rails seemed to be a reflection of the expectation of a fair seasonal pickup in general trade during the early months of the year. Chemicals were apparently again sold on basis of reports of price cutting in the industry.

The weekly petroleum statistics showed further reduction of crude output, and a decrease in refinery activity to 56.7 per cent of capacity, from 61.8.

Time money joined the recent decline in call loans from the 2 per cent level of recent months to 1½. Thirty-one banks reduced to 1½, 52 to 2 per cent, 2½ to 3. Call money was renewed at 1½, but was offered outside at 2 per cent.

New Groups Assuming Market Sponsorship Of Various Stocks

There is nothing evident that [illegible] make the market [illegible] stocks [illegible] Important changes revealed in the weekly consolidated condition report of member banks in leading cities reporting to the Federal Reserve were about in line with what had been indicated by the Reserve Bank figures. The outstanding change was found in a reduction of $161,000,000 in holdings of government securities by such banks. And the absence of any pressure on the government list in the open market indicated that member institutions had sold the bulk of these securities direct to the regional banks. Holdings of other investments increased by $72,000,000 so that the net decrease in total investments was $92,000,000. Loans on securities increased by $55,000,000 and "all other" or commercial borrowings by $28,000,000. Net demand deposits built up to provide for year-end disbursements, increased by $206,000,000.

Barring slight changes due to year-end adjustments, National Steel will show its $2 a share dividend earned twice in 1930, it is announced. More significant is the fact that the company earned its proportion of the dividend in each quarter of the year—even in the third and fourth periods, which were decidedly poor for the steel industry as a whole. National made that showing in earnings while carrying the third largest ore reserve in the industry and with one-third of its capacity non-productive its Great Lakes plant at Detroit just now approaching completion.

Encouraging opinion on the long range prospects for various industries were contained in private letters received by some of the commission houses during the past few days. They were responsible for a number of buying orders which had been held up during the year-end rush of the final calendar last year. Many of the inquiries which came in were of the type attracted by "bargain hunting."

A number of the big traders who maintained a short position in the market in the final months of last year have been covering since the beginning of 1931. Their buying has been rather urgent at times, and has been a big influence in the advances which have been recorded. Many of those operators had huge profits in 1930 on which they will pay heavy income taxes. They postponed covering additional shorts until this year, so that the profits will be increased in the 1931 incomes.

Forbes

Forbes Sees Measure of Business Recovery During Year.

By B. C. FORBES

My 1930 forecast was almost 100 per cent wrong.

Miraculously, my 1928 forecast was almost 100 per cent correct, I said here at the opening of 1929:

"In the face of monetary conditions it is not conceivable to this writer that the speculative whooper can be kept up throughout the year. My guess is that whatever further success the bulls may have in the early part of the year they will reach the end of their tether long before the end of the year."

Mr. Forbes

But a year ago my reading of the horoscope began such statements as these:

"Average stock quotations should end 1930 on levels distinctly higher than the end of 1929. . . . Candidly it takes courage—perhaps it is better to say rashness—to attempt to forecast the course of industry and business. My paradoxical prediction is that business will be reasonably satisfactory, but that employment will not be equally satisfactory. . . . General retail trade will do well if it does not prove subnormal. Unemployment, involving political and other agitation, threatens to be the sete noir of America's future. It is the supreme problem challenging America's industrial, financial, business statesmen."

Having made that confession what of 1931?

First, my guess is more optimistic than the common run of predictions now current. Their gist is that things will continue in the doldrums during the first half of the year and that they will do only slightly better in the second half—a drab picture.

I would not be astonished were the stock market to rebound in the very near future. If recovery in the first half of the year does not run beyond all reason, then I believe the advancing trend will continue—with, of course, plenty of backing and filling through the latter part of the year, with an average price level more substantially higher than ruled at the close of 1930.

Despite all the terrible losses suffered in the last 15 months, I rather think that once the upward movement gets vigorously under way stock speculation will again be more drawn to stocks than to bonds, the latter do not have sufficient action to appeal to the typical American.

IN MY OPINION the dawn of returning prosperity will first become visible to the public not in trade or industry but in the stock market. However, real recovery here is likely to be preceded by encouraging economic symptoms not visible to the untrained.

That such symptoms will develop during the present year can be taken for granted.

Just in which month—or which quarter of the year—they will become discernible it is impossible to foretell. One can only hazard a guess. Broadly, I am hopeful that improvement will set in distinctly sooner than popularly predicted.

It is entirely conceivable to me that stocks will average materially higher by the second quarter and that this will have a potent influence upon business sentiment and activity. Conditions during the second half of 1931 should prove substantially better than they were during the six months just ended.

QUOTATIONS FOR most agricultural commodities and for other basic raw materials are most unlikely to sink appreciably below their 1930 bottoms. They should rather advance in most instances in the forepart of the year and do more than maintain their advances in the second half. Wheat at the lowest price in a generation, cotton under 10 cents, copper near the lowest figure on record, silver under any minimum ever before reported, raw sugar below one-and-a-quarter cents a pound, rubber under eight-and-a-half cents, silk at $2.50 a pound, hides under 10 cents—that is not normal.

There was abundant reason for a violent collapse of the 1929 orgy of speculation and inflation. But there has not been abundant reason for commodities and materials acting as they have acted in recent months. Deflation has run riot. Mob psychology has gripped the nation, spreading panicky fear far and wide.

FINANCIAL AND other leaders find consolation and inspiration in the Eastern railway combination agreement, in the New York Reserve Bank's reduction of the discount rate to 2 per cent. In the similar action by the Bank of France, in the modest rally in various commodities, in the better behavior of the stock market in the last few days and in certain reports of mild pick-up in factory employment.

Incidentally, I still feel that unemployment will continue to plague this country until far more comprehensive and drastic action than any heretofore essayed is instituted.

Don't indulge in visions of anything like a boom year. But unless all deductions drawable from past history miscarry, 1931 should become known as recovery year.

Wrong Time Chosen for Trust Floatation

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

MANY MISTAKES WERE made in launching the investment trust movement in the United States. Capital structures were badly planned in some trusts of the management type. Underwriting profits were excessive in others. Too much reliance was placed on trading profits in a great majority. But the almost invariable mistake was in the time selected to bring investment trusts before the public.

The great distribution of the stocks of management trusts took place just before market prices reached their apex. No one knew precisely when the break in stocks would come. But it must have been apparent to the bankers who formed investment trusts that they would be in a declining market at some not distant period. The fact that most investment trust organizations were formed with the idea of taking a large share of their profits out of trading activities during a bull market and the further fact that the break found most of these organizations unprepared, either indicated a surprising lack of foresight or an amazing degree of carelessness with investors' money.

Time Unfavorable

IN SPEAKING OF THE time at which investment trusts were floated, it must be remembered that, while the moment was unfavorable for the investors, it was distinctly favorable from a sales standpoint. The investment public was in a receptive frame of mind. Sensational advances recorded by pioneer issues made it easy to market the stocks of subsequently formed investment companies regardless of their intrinsic values or their capital structures.

The public was thoroughly sold on the infallibility of the master minds behind the investment houses originating management trusts. The buyers were certain that the wisdom and contacts of these widely praised bankers would guard against the danger of running on financial shoals. The events of the past year have shown that, with only a few exceptions, this managerial ability was overrated.

Theory Sound

THE THEORY OF THE management type of investment trust is sound. This class of security has proved its worth in England where companies of this kind have been in existence for many years. The unsatisfactory results of the trusts in the United States are attributable to the disregard of fundamental principals in their formation and to the time when their promotion was at its height. The time element is not an excuse for their shortcomings. If the widely touted managements had been worth their salt they would not have been so woefully unprepared for the events of 1929 and 1930.

The ideal time to promote an investment trust, from the standpoint of an investor, would be at the tail of a bear market or in the early stages of a bull market. On this theory, the investment companies would be likely to become desirable investments at some time during the present year, unless the duration of the bear market should exceed most expectations.

Investors Distrustful

THE CURRENT DISTRUST of this type of stock is so widespread, however, that most of the existing trusts are selling for less than their actual liquidating values. The desire for diversification of investment in equity stocks is readily manifest in the large sales of shares of fixed trusts. In view of this it seems quite certain that the management trusts will sell at their real values in the not distant future. When that time comes it would be quite logical for the formation of new investment companies to be resumed. But the future organization of management trusts will have to proceed slowly and with the recognition of the principals of conservative investment. The first of these principals will have to be realization on the part of managements of their duty to stockholders as trustees.

ENLARGES AD EXPENDITURES

The American Tobacco Company and its subsidiary, American Cigar Company, have opened the new year by placing in the newspapers of the country the largest Lucky Strike advertising campaign and the largest Cremo Cigar advertising campaign in the history of either company.

"The great growth in the sale of these popular brands—unprecedented in the tobacco industry—has been made possible by the power of newspaper advertising. We are again in 1931 increasing our newspaper advertising expenditure because we believe that this year, like 1930, will be a year of bigger business with us. Frankly we do appreciate the power of public opinion generated through proper and intelligent newspaper advertising."

CAR LOADINGS DROP SHARPLY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Complete reports for the week show that 45,887,413 cars were loaded with revenue freight in 1930, the American Railway Association announces. This was a reduction of 6,940,512 cars, or 13.1 per cent under the number loaded in 1929 and a reduction of 5,702,474 cars or 11.1 per cent under 1928.

For the week ended December 27, loadings amounted to 538,419 cars, a decrease, due to Christmas holidays, of 175,391 cars compared with the preceding week. It also was a decrease of 100,970 cars compared with the corresponding week in 1929 and a decrease of 129,555 cars under the same week in 1928.

STEEL ACTIVITY RECOVERS

The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade will say:

The passing of the holidays has brought an encouraging upturn of activity in the iron and steel industry. Steel ingot production, at 41 per cent of capacity, has recovered all of its December losses, now being at virtually the same rate as in the closing week of November. Blast furnaces, which were temporarily banked late last month, are being brought back into service.

Much of the current improvement in operations is due to January shipping orders placed in December, but a fair volume of releases since the first of the year and a gain in the number of inquiries point to continued expansion of demand in line with normal seasonal tendencies.

Automobile steel, railroad steel, tin plate and structural tonnage are contributing most to current mill activity, but a general upswing in demand is looked for to compensate for drastic inventory reduction in the closing month of 1930. The extraordinary pressure that buyers brought to bear on stocks is indicated by the fact that the December shipments of a large sheet producer were the smallest for any month since July, 1921.

Betterment in motor car production is more rapid than the steel industry had expected. Automobile output in the United States and Canada in December was 150,000 units, a gain of 16,000 over the total for November, thereby reversing the seasonal trend for the first time in many years. The increase was made despite suspensions by Ford and other large manufacturers late in the month and was due, in large part, to Chevrolet's production of 64,000 cars.

Finished steel prices show greater firmness. Makers of cold-finished steel bars have announced a new price of 2.10 cents a pound, an advance of $2 a ton. Likewise, producers of plates, shapes and bars are asking 1.65 cents, Pittsburgh, on new business, but contract coverage at 1.60 cents has been so widespread that there will be no real test of the higher figure for several weeks.

The Iron Age composite price for heavy melting scrap has advanced to $11.33 a ton, after holding at $11.25 for a month. The finished steel and pig iron composites are unchanged at 2.121 cents a pound, and $15.90 a ton, respectively.

LOWER WHEAT ACREAGE SEEN

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 7.—Chairman Alexander Legge of the Federal Farm Board, has expressed the belief that the wheat acreage of the United States would show a decrease of at least 3 per cent this year. He said the situation concerning the acreage planted to wheat "is not quite as bad as figures might indicate."

The Department of Agriculture recently announced a decrease of 11 per cent. Chairman Legge said this figure was conservative and that the reduction might be as much as 4 per cent.

He said wheat growers of Nebraska and Colorado had taken the lead in reduction of acreage and complimented farmers of these states for their co-operation with the Farm Board.

DEAR MR. KABIBBLE, SHALL I MARRY A GROUCH? = O. T.

THAT MAKES HIS SECOND MARRIAGE

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The day before her marriage to Jim Tracy, wealthy Connie Calvert learns through Duke Garson, underworld character, of the existence of a half-sister, Kitty, by her father's secret first marriage. Kitty, a produce of the slums, demands $100,000 for her silence. Connie, glad to have found her sister, offers to take her home. Kitty refuses. Connie is favorably impressed by Duke's magnetism. When Jim objects to her interest in Kitty, Connie breaks her engagement. She realizes Jim is mainly interested in her money and that she does not love him. Connie tells her mother about Kitty. Connie sees Kitty and learns of her laborious daily struggle for existence. Kitty goes home with Connie and is welcomed by Mrs. Calvert. When Jim visits he takes an interest in Kitty. Connie, believing Jim a philanderer, is concerned for Kitty. Kitty admits that she likes Jim, but is afraid that he does not like her. Connie warns her of his selfishness. Connie's distrust of Jim causes her to seek Garson's aid. Duke does not agree with Connie's views.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVII.

Connie sat perfectly still, looking at Duke Garson and trying to decide, out of her amazement, whether she was angry or not. While she had been trying to impress him with her wisdom she had produced, apparently, nothing more than a cynical disregard. Garson had spoken to her as though she were all wrong—cool and without any trappings of gallantry he had questioned both her motives and her common sense.

And in the midst of this most disconcertingly, Connie found herself thinking what an attractive man Duke Garson was! Of all thoughts, this should have been the very last, but Duke Garson's personality persistently intruded into her mind and diluted her resentment. She was mystified that he did not see the case as she saw it obviously, he had sufficient intelligence.

Fascinates Her

Now, while she did not feel at all romantic it was impossible for her to ignore the dramatic aspects of Garson's charm. For one thing, his eyes held her fascinated as do unfathomable dark pools, curiously alive. He was still, she guessed, under 30, vaguely, he was handsome, but this was lost sometimes in the aura of dynamism that hung around him.

What she wondered was his life history? It was hardly possible for her to realize that he was a crook, a criminal, yet she knew obviously that he was connected with the underworld. This, however, did not give him any glamor beyond that of his natural self. His mystery was a challenge to her feminine curiosity—here was a lure that led her on.

"I thought you would agree with me about Kitty and Jim," Connie said, her voice a little hurt. It is not pleasant to have you disagree entirely with everything I say."

"Whatever I think cannot matter a great deal with you," he told her, crisply. "Haven't you realized yet how little one opinion can mean to another? I mean, how little it can influence someone else. People usually go what they want to and get what they are looking for."

"No," Connie told him, honestly. "I don't know anything of the kind."

"No, I suppose you don't," he admitted. "Your life with everything you want at hand doesn't bring a great deal of understanding about people. There is always a temptation to help people out, but ten to one your efforts are wasted. It's so much easier to do harm than good."

Speaks About Connie

"After what I told you about Jim Tracy, you surely don't want Kitty to marry him?" Connie demanded.

"Because he isn't perfect?"

"I don't mean that at all!"

"Well, look at it from his angle. He's a young chap in the upper classes marrying a girl from Tenth avenue; she has some money, it's true, but she probably lacks his training and refinement. Suppose they lose her money? He'd be saddled with her for life and who should say she might not pull him down to Tenth avenue if he stuck with her? It's even possible that Kitty might ruin his whole career. The objections you see, aren't all on one side."

"That's nonsense," he returned, shortly. "Human beings have to take risks. There are objections to everything, if we want to let objections rule. Do you consider yourself a perfect bride for some man?"

"Of course not."

"Of course you aren't—you are young and beautiful, wealthy and attractive, but you could as easily make a man miserable as happy. Of course, any number of them would be delighted to take the risk. You'd probably control a man to death."

"I would not—" She checked herself suddenly. "Besides, why should we talk about me? I'm not in any danger of making an unhappy marriage."

"You'll always be in danger," he replied, "as long as you stay like you are."

"I asked you to come up here to talk about Kitty, not me," she reminded him.

"But I'd much rather talk about you, Miss Calvert," he stated directly.

Invited to Stay

Now, she felt, the last of their original purpose was being lost.

"Why?"

"Because you are ever so much more interesting to me than Kitty. You see, I know her type quite well—or the type she used to be. I haven't had much opportunity to meet girls like you. For instance, I know quite a lot of girls like Kitty, but you are a mystery. I don't know what you are really like behind all of this outward self that I can see. Of course, I suppose it would all come to the same thing—you and Kitty are probably alike under the skin but you have an illusion of superiority that might absorb me, under other conditions."

No one had talked quite like that to Connie before; tiny tremors of interest ran through her, and she was conscious that she was pleasantly flattered.

"You say that because you don't know me and anything that is mysterious is interesting," she told him lightly.

"That's all. You probably wouldn't like me if you really knew me."

"I think so, but I'm not sure. You seem so remote and cold, Miss Calvert. Your surface emotions are rather unusual, but I can't help wondering what you are like inside."

"Very much."

"Then stay here a few days and help me out with Kitty and Jim. Maybe you'll have a chance to find out!"

DAILY TRUE STORY — The Playboy

Jack Morton had to wait, like an ordinary mortal, outside of his father's office. When it came Jack's turn he could see John G. Morton for a few minutes.

Jack nodded.

Some bright quip about his father's fondness for giving orders came to mind, but Jack decided not to say it.

Business men came by appointment, saw John G., and departed. Big business men, they were. Jack waited. He would be wedged in at some time during the afternoon.

Finally Phipps said, "All right, sir," to Jack and he went in to see his father.

"What's up?" the elder asked, crisply.

"I am—been up since 8 this morning. Was told I couldn't see you until this afternoon."

"How much will this cost me? Must be pretty steep to get you out at 8 in the morning."

"It will cost you a job," Jack said, cheerfully.

"I came to get a job. What do you want me to do?"

"You want a job? A job here?"

Jack nodded.

"Sure, what do you want me to do?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing?"

"Been playing long enough. I took it for granted that after I got through college you'd expect me to jam the old nose against the grindstone—learn your graft from the ground up—"

"Graft?" bellowed his father. "Meaning game, profession, business. How do you acquire a virgin forest or a dismal swamp or a city dump, run streets through it and make a handsome residential section grow there? That's your game—profession, isn't it?"

"I don't do it by snapping my fingers—it's no magic——"

Fiancee Disappointed

"I thought you did just that—you snap your fingers, give orders, and—presto—it's done. Now, I'm grateful for all you've done, the jolly little scrapes you got me out of and all that, and I'm ready to go to work."

"You can't work—you're a playboy. My fault, largely—let you play too long. All right, I can stand it. Go and play and I'll stay here and work."

He picked up Inez Preston at her home and drove up country to visit mutual friends. Jack was deadly serious about Inez and he hoped that she was quite as serious about him, but he wasn't sure.

She asked him about going to work, for he had told her of his plans.

"The matter is at status quo, Inez."

She was disappointed when he refused to discuss it further. And he was ashamed to confess that his father had no use for him in business.

Evidently he repeated to Inez things old Morton had told him, for, some weeks later, while Jack was still trying to think of something to do about his disappointment, she told Jack that she was disappointed in him.

"I'm afraid your father is right, Jack. You will always be just a playboy," she said.

Stopping for gas some miles beyond his father's country place, he saw Dan Gardner stop there. Dan was general manager for the development branch of his father's business. He had been out looking over some property. Jack persuaded him to have dinner with him.

"What amazes me," Jack said, fishing for information, "is how my father is able to put through all of those big deals. I haven't any notion of the extent of his business methods, except that he hires smart guys like you to work for him."

The compliment pleased Gardner, who talked at length on what a brilliant business man John G. Morton was.

Begins Business

"Take that Melon Bay property—it was just a scrubby slope. He got it for a song, developed it, restricted it to small estates costing at least fifty thousand, and it's half built up now as an exclusive millionaire colony. Of course he didn't do it for his health. He's got at least 20 people on the string now, all ready to buy there and build, and between the two of us, your father must be getting around a thousand per cent clean profit."

"It's a great game," Jack said.

Next day he investigated Melon Bay. He became interested in the Oak Knoll farm just beyond, by the railroad track. The place was run down and for sale. Perhaps here would be a chance for him.

The next time he saw Inez she asked him what he was doing.

"That isn't much, is it?"

"I expect a big profit. I only paid $4,000 for the land."

"What are you going to manufacture?"

"Nothing, if I'm fortunate," Jack said, solemnly.

"Hope not, dear. See you later; got to go to my office."

Jack did have an office. He put a friend in there as manager. The office contained but little furniture, some drawings of a big factory and that was about all.

On the door was:

NATIONAL A. G. CO.,
M. Jones, Gen. Mgr.

One day a letter came from Attorney Preston asking Mr. Jones to call. Mr. Jones called. There was some heated conversation. Mr. Jones would ask the owner of the company if he cared to talk with John G. Morton; if he did, Mr. Morton would call at the office. Attorney Preston nearly had apoplexy at this. He tried to explain that people went to see Morton.

"Not these people. He'll come or not come as he pleases," Mr. Jones said, jauntily, "and he'll come at any time my boss appoints."

John G. Morton did visit the National A. G. Company office in person and he found his son there.

"Kindly address me as president and owner of the National Adamant Glue Company, Mr. Morton," Jack answered.

"You—you bought that Oak Knoll?"

"I did."

"And you had carload after carload of that damnable fish refuse dumped there?"

"I did."

"Why?"

"As soon as my plant is built I'll have this fish refuse ready to turn into my glue—great market for glue; you can't get stuck on my glue, sir."

"But I'll have a health board stop it—"

"My property is outside the residential zone of the Melon Bay millionaire colony, sir. It is in the commercial zone."

"But my prospects won't buy. The people who have built and live there are suffocating with the stenches, especially in an east wind—"

"And east winds will blow, sir. Sorry, but a man must have a place for his business—"

Father Agrees

"How much?"

"I'll write you a check—"

"I paid four thousand. My selling price is slightly more—in fact an even hundred thousand."

"I won't buy."

"Merely business."

"And you are actually going to make glue there?"

"Go out and take a smell, sir."

"Being merely a playboy, I know nothing of business, so I stick out for the hundred thousand."

"And one thing more—tell Preston what sort of a playboy I am. I want him to tell Inez."

"All right."

John G. Morton did tell Preston, who told Inez, and it was quite all right, especially when Morton took Jack into business with him.

SCOOP! FRISBY MOVES FOR PEACE WITH REDS

By GUY GIFFORD

(Special Correspondent.)

"Your very name," said Frisby in his words of welcome, "show that the red race is perking up."

"Won't you stay for dinner?" Chief Leaping Cow asked the visiting Congressman.

"No," replied Frisby. "I am very democratic. I don't want you poor Indians to go putting on the dog for me."

U. S. Railroads Must Be Linked With American Ship Lines

In instructing the Interstate Commerce Commission to recommend a system of railroad consolidations, Congress was thinking of an American transportation system.

But that system cannot end with the railroads, at the water's edge. It must be extended by an American merchant marine to the ends of the earth.

That's what the British transportation system is, and that is why for centuries British trade has dominated the world.

Fortunately, American railroads can be tied up with American steamship lines to the advantage of both. In fact, this is very possibly THE solution of the American merchant marine problem.

That problem is a simple one to understand. Because American wages are higher, it costs more to build a ship in American yards and it costs more to man and operate her.

So if our ships are to compete in the international carrying trade they must have a subsidy to offset their higher operation cost. Congress hates to grant ship subsidies.

There is only one alternative. If some way can be found to give American ships MORE TRAFFIC to carry than their foreign rivals, the American ships can stand higher operating costs and still make money.

American railroads have the power to direct the routing of a high volume of export traffic and, if it were to their interest, could throw this business preferably to American ships.

One way to get the railroads to do this would be to encourage them to take a financial interest in American steamship concerns, which would be considered as oversea extension of our rail lines.

The hocus pocus of foreign trade and travel could be done away with. The citizen of the humblest hamlet could go to his railroad office and get a passenger ticket or a bill of lading over an all American route to any destination in the world.

We should have an era of ship-building unequaled in our history if it were known that the traffic power and the financial strength of the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the great American railroad corporations were behind American steamship operators like Dollar, Munson and Chapman.

Can't the Interstate Commerce Commission or the President himself think in terms of an American transportation system as extensive as American trade, girdling the earth?

Greater New Kensington

Allegheny River Boroughs Have Made a Wise Move in Consolidating.

Congratulations to Greater New Kensington, which has just been formed by the consolidation of the borough with the adjacent borough of Parnassus.

The two communities have made a wise move in merging. The increased size will confer additional prestige and be good for business.

Municipal government expenses will be saved by unifying the two borough administrations.

There are a number of other boroughs in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, lying side by side, with nothing to indicate the boundary lines, which might find it advantageous to unite—East Pittsburgh, Turtle Creek and Wilmerding, for example, or Beaver Falls, New Brighton and Rochester.

Fewer Children Killed

Education of Adults is Now the Thing to be Emphasized in Campaign for Prevention of Traffic Accidents.

Despite a 10 per cent increase in traffic the number of children killed by automobiles in Pittsburgh last year was four less than the year before.

Boys and girls are becoming educated to stop, look and listen before crossing the streets.

Even cats and dogs are said to be growing "traffic conscious."

The traffic education of adults is now the thing to be emphasized in safety campaigns. Grown-ups must be taught to overcome the careless habits acquired in their early years when there were no autos.

Fire Prevention School

Reduction In Insurance Rates Is Best Proof of the Value of Such Instruction.

The course of lectures on fire prevention to be given under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce presents an opportunity to learn something that may prove invaluable. All who have charge of buildings as caretakers and janitors should avail themselves of it.

The fire prevention school proved its usefulness last year. The underwriters give it credit for a reduction in the city's fire losses and a cut of $1,500,000 in fire insurance premiums.

An additional saving in premiums is worth seeking.

Postoffice Prospects

Report That Ground Probably Will Be Broken in February for New Structure Is Pleasant News.

The new year starts with bright prospects for an early start on the new postoffice. The plans for the foundation have been completed by the architects and the present occupants of the site have been directed to vacate.

The hope is now entertained that ground will be broken for the $8,000,000 structure some time in February. It is cheerful news. Commencement of the work will have a stimulating effect on sentiment. It will promote optimism.

Now if County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong would only get work under way on the Town Hall. . . . .

Important Decision

Stability of Building and Loan Associations is Protected By Supreme Court Ruling.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has just handed down a decision of more than ordinary importance.

The court has ruled, in effect, that, to protect itself from insolvency or from forced sale of its investments, at ruinous prices, a building and loan association may defer payment temporarily to withdrawing stockholders.

The decision will help to maintain the stability of building and loan associations and protect the investments of thousands of Pennsylvanians.

Glass and Pottery Show

Mechanical Age Has Not Destroyed Beauty of Craftsmanship, as Ceramic Exhibits Will Show.

The announcement that pottery and glass manufacturers soon will open a 12-day exposition of their wares in Pittsburgh, directs attention to local industries in whose products the artistic and useful are indissolubly wedded.

The mechanical age, it is often said, has destroyed the beauty of craftsmanship. The glass and pottery show will disprove it.

Grace and beauty are to be found even in the cheapest of our machine-made ceramic products, though we often fail to appreciate it. People rhapsodize over pottery of primitive races that is not nearly so attractive as that made in our own plants.

Dole or Bread Line

Which Is More Humiliating?

BIG BUSINESS: 'WE MAY HAVE BREADLINES BUT, THANK GOD, NO DOLE.'

This picture, made by Arthur Young, is published in a new magazine called "The Unemployed." Its editors will share the hope that the runs for this magazine will not last long.

But the British understand it, and have good reasons. They prefer the dole to riots and possibly revolution.

Outside of a few great strikes, we have not known serious rioting since the Civil War.

The dole should be combatted, for it has a bad effect on men's minds undoubtedly, humiliates them, hurts their pride.

But it doesn't hurt their pride any more than their pride would be hurt by standing for two or three hours in a bread line, perhaps in rain or snow, waiting to get a cup of coffee and a piece of bread.

If men, women and children are starving, they must be fed—at least as long as the Government owns 90,000,000 bushels of wheat, and doesn't quite know what to do with it.

We are past the days when Marie Antoinette, told that the people lacked bread, wondered why the people didn't eat cake.

The bread line will not meet any serious situation. The word "dole" may be omitted, but direct distribution of money to buy food by Government agencies, not by private benevolent organizations, direct payments in small amounts to the heads of families, would be the best and most economical method in a real emergency.

THE FORCE OF GRAVITATION

By Archibald Henderson

In physics and astronomy there are a large number of fundamental quantities, "constants" they are called, which require to be determined with the greatest accuracy. Sometimes the task of determining the value of one of these constants is exceedingly difficult and tedious.

For many years A. A. Michelson has been carrying on experiments of ever-increasing accuracy, to determine the velocity of light. It was primarily for his brilliant experimental work in determining the size of the electron that R. A. Millikan was awarded the Nobel Prize for physics.

For almost two centuries scientists have been conducting experiments for the purpose of determining the constant of gravitations. From this value we may determine the mass of the earth, for example, and the force with which the earth pulls the moon.

The law, according to Sir Isaac Newton's formulation, is known to everyone—any two bodies in the universe attract each other directly as the product of their masses and inversely as the square of the distance apart. If the masses increase for the same distance apart the force of attraction increases; but if the masses remain unchanged and the distance apart increases the force of attraction decreases.

There is a gravitational constant, called "g" which enters into the calculation, although the units may be so chosen as to make the value of "g" unity. The exact gravitational force is obtained in scientific units by multiplying the two masses, dividing by the square of the distance between them, and multiplying the result by "g," the constant of gravitation.

The exact value of this gravitational constant is required for many calculations and determinations. In making large-scale maps such as in the coast survey, it is not enough to assume that the curvature of the earth's surface is that of a great sphere. On this assumption, undesirable errors are introduced.

It is necessary to know the values of the gravitational constant at different points on, and at different heights above, the earth's surface. Another surprising use for the gravity determinations is encountered in prospecting for oil. To obviate expense in drilling to great depths, only to find "dry" wells, physical methods are resorted to for detecting underground deposits as a guide to favorable locations for drilling wells.

One of these methods depends upon the measurement of the force of gravity. The value of the gravitational constant is essential in ballistics, for studying the trajectories or paths of projectiles, and is likewise employed in determining the motions of the stars.

Over a period of seven years Dr. Paul R. Heyl, physicist of the United States Bureau of Standards, has been conducting experiments to make an accurate determination of the constant of gravitation. For almost two centuries scientists have been working on this task. The first experiment, which was unsatisfactory in its result, was carried out by a Frenchman, Pierre Bouguer, in 1740.

Some 25 years later the Rev. Nevil Maskelyne, an English astronomer, made an ingenious experiment with a plumb bob on each side of a mountain, measuring the deviation from the vertical caused by the mountainous mass. Of necessity, the result was only approximate, since it was impossible to determine the exact mass of the mountain.

The method employed by Heyl is based upon that employed by Henry Cavendish in 1797-1798. Cavendish attached two tiny balls to the end of a little rod, balanced at the end of a long thin wire. As two large masses of metal are brought near, the small balls are pulled toward them and the wire is twisted.

A tiny mirror attached to the wire near the rod turns with it, and moves a spot of light reflected from it to a distant screen. The largest masses used by Heyl were steel cylinders weighing about 150 pounds each.

Although the attraction exerted upon tiny balls weighing about two ounces was about that of the weight of ink in a printed period, this force was measured with an accuracy of the thirtieth of one per cent. The final figure for "g," the constant of gravitation, found by Heyl was 6.67 over 100,000,000.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

My Son, I charge thee be not deceived by fake signs.

* * *

For, lo, there be seven times seven varieties of FLY-PAPER, wherewith the damsels of Babylon seek to entangle the feet of unsuspecting man.

* * *

Yet women are the same today, yesterday and forever; and all their crimes on the path of love lead to matrimony.

* * *

Behold, the "independent" damsel flaunteth her freedom, protesting, "No wedding bells for ME! For I am NOT a marrying-girl!" And thus are thy fears allayed and thy suspicions chloroformed, that she may the more easily slip the halter about thy neck.

Yet another damsel painteth the joys and the beauties of "Companionate Marriage," which leaveth a man foot-loose, while it affordeth him all the comforts of domesticity and the honors of wedlock.

* * *

But the wild bachelor, who hearkeneth unto the siren song which offereth him "something for nothing," shall soon find himself stoking the furnace.

* * *

One damsel shall chatter of the 50-50 marriage and show thee how two pay envelopes may blossom, where there was only one. But trust her not.

And another shall entice thee with home cooking. Yea, with heavenly pie-crusts and glorified waffles shall she lure thy palate, saying "I am SO old-fashioned! I ADORE to cook!" Yet, in her Hope Chest, thou shalt peradventure find a can-opener.

* * *

Yet by this stunt hath many an unwary single-footer been backed into the shafts of double harness! and thou shalt not escape.

* * *

One woman shall flatter thy strength, and another shall coddle thy weakness; one shall take thee by storm, and another shall snare thee by strategy. One shall pursue thee boldly, and another shall seem to elude thee.

For the damsel of yesterday had but ONE deadly weapon—even her femininity. But the damsel of today hath seven times seven RACKETS! And what man can escape ALL of these?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Even forward producers no longer deny the theater is in a bad way. Hope was felt the present season might bring an upturn but it appears only a hope. A half dozen so-called hits, with the best seats in speculators' hands, do a rushing business. But that is all.

The legitimate theater has never taken the cinema seriously and this is largely responsible for its undoing. At first it hooted the silent movie could never offer stability because it was inarticulate. When the movie spoke out loud, they jeered the voices were rasping, spurious.

Truth is the theater, like many other moribund institutions, was merely resenting the age old antipathy to change. In the meanwhile, save in New York alone, the legitimate theater is on its last legs. It shows no signs of reviving. And don't let them fool you.

The extraordinarily astute George M. Cohan caroled the lugubrious lilt of the theater's swan song at a recent banquet. In a voice with a touching tremolo he told of his own despairing efforts to fan the dying embers to life. "But," he added, "my plays opened and closed mechanically."

Cohan stressed lack of co-ordination among producers. "They do not pull together as people in other pursuits," he sighed. And he said pathetically, and I think truly, something tremendous had gone out of the theater—qualities that made it what it was when he was waving the flag.

I string along with George M.'s conviction the theater has grown too poetical, arty and allegorical. Plus its sexual abnormalities, exploitation of effeminate men, masculine women and flapper fluesies. It will require a lot of steadying to restore its pristine glories.

The legitimate theater lost its wallop. One no longer finds those healthy emotions, the tear and the belly laugh. Audiences sit rather strained while some playwrighting propagandist is spewing his half-baked notions about the world, people and God.

* * *

There is a specious theory the theater must educate. That is not its province. Its mission is to entertain, and because it fails people are turning to talkies, which feature thrills the theater discarded. The theater has too much jackdaw culture—too many grand thinkers and not enough Al Woodses. Talkies turn people away with villians untrussed and virtue triumphant while a handful of feckless lorgnette lifters are being bored to extinction by something or other from the Greek.

* * *

The reason for the unusual success of such lawdry play as "Abie's Irish Rose" was because it feebly satisfied a pronounced taste for mawkish emotions with which we are all possessed. The truly successful shows in the past two years are those stirring us emotionally. "The Green Pastures," for example.

* * *

Too, I think Cohan hit the nail on the head when he said with that deadly calm which in him becomes rather eloquent: "All the legitimate theater has needed is to be itself." * * *

Another thing—and they have just thought of this—that has turned people away from the legitimate theater, is high handed robbery at the box office. Best seats for years have been turned over to conscienceless gyppers. Today theaters print screaming ads that best seats are at the box office. That is not true. And anyway it comes a trifle late.

* * *

Yet my own reaction is that the screen will never bring the robust vitality of flesh and blood players. Even today I would rather see a second-rate vaudeville show than the most extravagant talkie yet produced.

* * *

Vagrant thought: No other great artist is so self-effacing as Paderewski. * * *
